Senate Shift To Restore WPA Slash Gains Ground

Full Committee Odds Reported Definitely In Favor of Original $875,000,000 Figure

All prospect of undercutting the House $725,000,000 deficiency relief appropriation apparently vanished last night, as Senate economy advocates prepared for a neck-and-neck battle in the Senate Appropriations sub-committee today to hold the bill to that amount.

A pronounced shift in Senate sentiment, following heavy pressure from labor, municipal and Administration spokesmen, raised the possibility that the full committee may restore the entire $875,000,000 appropriation, regardless of what action the sub-committee takes.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the sub-committee, was called to the White House last night by the President immediately on conclusion of hearings.

Relief Situation Discussed

"We discussed the relief situation pretty fully," Adams said. "There is nothing I can add to that."

The Colorado Senator on Tuesday had taken issue with the President's statement that between 1,000,000 and 1,250,000 would be forced off WPA rolls if the 17 per cent House cut was approved. Adams had computed WPA displacements at not more than 800,000.

He explained last night that he and the President had reached apparently conflicting conclusions by using different methods of distributing the cut over the period of the next five months.

Sub-committee sentiment was nearly evenly divided between the $150,000,000 slash ordered by the House, and the full amount asked by the President, as the group concluded hearings at 5 p. m. yesterday.

One sub-committee member, following an informal poll, said there was a 50-50 chance the House cut may be sustained in the sub-committee, but the full committee odds are definitely in favor of the Administration's $875,000,000 figure.

Borah Against Cut

An Independent Republican meanwhile joined the bolt from the smaller appropriation allowed by the House. Senator Borah, of Idaho (not a committee member), said he did not know how much is needed, but in his judgment $725,0000,000 is not enough.

"I am for economy," said Borah, "but there are plenty of places to cut Federal expenditures without taking it out of the hides of the poor, helpless people on relief.

"Many of them now are living like beasts—hundreds of thousands of them. I know there is a lot of waste and mismanagement in WPA, but I am not going to have it on my conscience that I did not vote for the amount those in charge say is necessary."

Borah said there "will be no such close figuring" when defense appropriations come before the Congress.

"Here they are proposing to drop 200,000 persons from relief in the

Bandits Threaten Coal Yard Clerk, Flee Customer

Miss Clara Denegri, 18 K street northeast, clerk at a coal yard at Third and P streets northwest, yesterday was threatened by two colored men, one of them armed with a pistol. She told police they came to the side door, but fled when a customer appeared.

Meanwhile a 19-year-old colored man, held at the Fifth Precinct Station for investigation, yesterday was identified as one of three bandits who held up Thomas Crawford, 221 Seventh street northeast, Capital Transit bus driver, and robbed him Saturday.

The youth was seized early in the day along with 14 other persons in a series of pickup squad raids led by Lieut. Joseph Shimon.

Earlier a colored gunman threatened Kenneth Hill, night clerk at the Fairfax Hotel, and escaped with about $50.

China Gives Up Hope in League

Geneva, Jan. 18 (AP).—China today abandoned hope the League of Nations would name a committee including the United States for coordinating action against Japan.

Victor Hoo, Chinese delegate, said the best China could hope for after today's Council session was "just another resolution."

Catholics Dedicate Cathedral With Klan Wizard as Guest

Hiram W. Evans Watches Cardinal Dougherty Direct Services in Atlanta; Pleased to Accept Bishop's Invitation

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Jan. 18.—Catholic dignitaries dedicated the pro-cathedral of Christ the King here today with Imperial Wizard Hiram W. Evans of the Ku Klux Klan as an invited guest.

Describing himself as "just a spectator," the klan leader and members of his family gathered for the services under the direction of Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia.

Bishop Gerald P. O'Hara of the Savannah-Atlanta diocese extended the invitation. Dr. Evans said he accepted with "great pleasure."

Mgr. Dennis J. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, Washington, delivered the sermon in which he praised American freedom and said "only a people enjoying the fundamental rights of liberty could take part" in such a dedication.

The klan in recent years has subordinated racial and religious matters to a program of opposition to "communism and the C. I. O."

Dr. Evans, a dentist, is himself a member of the Christian Church.

Rogge Accusation Ends Second Day of Hearing by SEC

Transamerica Corporation, holding company for Giannini banks, was accused yesterday by John O. Rogge, counsel for the Securities and Exchange Commission, of valuing stocks acquired when it was organized in 1928 at approximately $800,000,000 in excess of their book value.

The effect of a series of transactions, he said, was to "freeze" the stocks on Transamerica's books at a figure representing "an unrealized appreciation" of this amount.

The accusation concluded the second day in the SEC hearing to determine whether Transamerica stock should be removed from the boards of stock exchanges. The commission has charged that financial records filed with it by the giant Pacific Coast concern contain "false and misleading statements."

An attempt by Rogge to inquire into alleged deals in Transamerica stock by the Pacific Coast Mortgage Co. was blocked when Henry Fitts, SEC trial examiner, sustained an objection by William Stanley, former Assistant to the Attorney General and counsel for Transamerica, on the ground that the matter was not pertinent.

Rogge appealed to the commission from the ruling of the trial examiner. The commission, at a special meeting during the lunch hour, refused to review Fitts' decision.

Rogge then filed a motion for an amendment to the SEC order launching the stock delisting proceeding to enlarge the scope of the hearing to include the Pacific Coast Mortgage Co. deals.

In the proposed enlargement, he charged that A. P. Giannini, head

D. C. Approves Plan for WPA School Matrons

Project Would Provide 140 for Elementary Pupils

An $83,000 WPA project to provide jobs for 140 matrons in Washington's elementary schools was approved yesterday by the Board of Education.

The board also:

Named Mrs. Elva C. Wells, District school teacher since 1929, assistant principal of Roosevelt High School to succeed the late Mrs. Dasie I. Huff.

Moved to halt vandalism and petty thievery in school buildings after hearing Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, report District taxpayers lose $14,000 a year "because of wilful breaking of windows in public schools."

Decided to take no formal action in the future on location of filling stations near schools, but to leave this matter to the zoning board.

Received assurance from Dr. Ballou that the girls' gymnasium at Calvin Coolidge High School would be ready for use when the school is completed in 1940, on the promise of the District Commissioners that requests for deficiency appropriations of $80,000 to $90,000 would be pushed.

Authorized Assistant Superintendent G. C. Wilkinson to proceed with plans for observance of the seventy-fifth anniversary of public education for children in the District, the program to begin March 1 and continue through June 1.

First Assistant Superintendents Robert L. Haycock, in charge of elementary schools, divisions 1 to 9, and Wilkinson, in charge of divisions 10 to 13, have been named by the board to work out details of the matrons' project with Mrs. Mary

Crashes on Icy Streets Hurt 7; Fair and Colder Forecast Today

Seven persons were injured yesterday in and near Washington, three seriously, in highway crashes, motorcycle-auto accidents and in sledding spills. Sled runners put out one child's eye and pierced the leg of another.

In a blinding snowstorm at dawn rescuers worked more than an hour to extricate a man from the telescoped cab of one of two freight trucks which crashed head-on on a slippery hill on the Lee highway near Falls Church, Va.

Three men were rescued from the wreckage and taken to Georgetown Hospital, where their condition last night was reported "serious."

Dr. Frank B. Schultz, Falls Church physician, standing ankle deep in slushy snow with gasoline dripping over his feet from smashed tanks, worked more than an hour to reach one of the men, pinned on a ledge behind the driver's seat.

A van bringing 3,000 chickens here from Shelbyville, Del., skidded in snow on the railroad overpass at Florida and New York avenues and struck an American Ice Co. truck. About 700 chickens were killed.

The Weather Bureau last night reported 1.7 inches of snow fell in Washington Tuesday night and early part of yesterday. Measurements were made difficult by the rapidity with which the snow melted.

Fair and colder weather was forecast for today. The mercury hit a

Congress Gets U. S. Pay Tax Plan Today

Fiscal Aide Testifies $300,000,000 Is Lost Yearly Through Exemptions

President Roosevelt's drive to permit taxation of Federal, State and local government salaries, as well as income from their securities was given impetus yesterday by officials of three Government divisions appearing before a special Senate committee.

The President will send a message to Congress on the subject today.

In reports that have been in process of preparation since the President made his first proposal to Congress covering the idea last April, the officials contended:

That the present great volume of tax-exempt securities is damming up capital needed for private enterprise.

That the public now demands taxation of Federal and State salaries "in the same proportion that the incomes of others are taxed."

$300,000,000 Estimate

John W. Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury, declared that as much as $300,000,000 annually might be realized by the Federal Government if exemptions on the two sources of revenue were eliminated. The amount realized from the elimination of the Federal income-tax exemption now accorded State and local employes would be only around $16,000,000, he estimated—with States probably faring considerably better from their ability to tax Federal salaries paid to their residents.

"Although of substantial importance from the point of view of tax justice," Hanes declared, "the elimination of exemption of governmental salaries from income taxes is of less economic and fiscal significance than the problem of tax-exempt securities."

Asserting that some $65,000,000,000 now is invested in tax-exempt securities of national, State and local governmental agencies, Hanes asserted this discourages investment in other fields where risk is involved.

"Industry finds it difficult to compete with tax-exempt securities in attracting capital of individuals in the higher income brackets," he said.

Risk Investments Encouraged

"As the situation now stands we are encouraging venturesome investment by those who ought not to take the risks and discouraging it in the case of those who should."

When savings of taxes are considered, he said, a man with an annual income of $500,000 would profit just as much by buying a tax-exempt bond bearing 3 per cent interest as by buying a taxable security returning 10.71 per cent.

On the other hand, he said, a man with a $5,000 income would find that a 3 per cent tax-exempt bond would be equivalent only to a 3.12 per cent taxable security.

James W. Morris, Assistant Attorney General; John Philip Wenchel, general counsel for the Internal Revenue Bureau, and W. W. Gardner, of the Solicitor General's office, also argued for the exemptions.

"Possibly there is no one single item which so irritates the taxpayer of modest means," Wenchel declared, "as the statutory exemption of Government bondholders

Bulkley's Former Secretary Plunges 8 Floors to Death

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 18.—Clad in a pink nightgown, Mrs. Mabel Wright Mitchell, 48, one-time secretary to former United States Senator Robert J. Bulkley, dropped to her death today from the eleventh floor of a hotel to the roof of a three-story annex.

Coroner E. E. Smith, who had not reached a verdict, said he could find no one who saw her plunge.

A search of her room, Dr. Smith stated, disclosed only four empty whisky bottles, another partly filled, 27 cents in money and a hotel bill for $84. Mrs. Mitchell had registered at the hotel January 1.

Former Senator Bulkley said Mrs. Mitchell had worked on his secretarial staff in Washington and previously had been employed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Substitute Reorganizing Bill Drawn

Rep. Warren, Close To President, Writes Compromise Plan To End Discord

By Robert C. Albright.

A new Government reorganization bill is being drafted by Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, "with a view to eliminating discordant elements."

Warren, close consultant of the President on reorganization matters, declined to elaborate on this brief announcement.

His statement coincided with a move by Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, to extend the life of the special House Reorganization Committee, which expired with the last Congress.

Cochran's resolution to continue the committee was referred to the Rules Committee, which is not expected to block it.

Against One-Man Rule

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, served notice last night he will go before the Rules group in an effort to have civil service features removed from jurisdiction of the special committee.

Ramspeck, who opposed provisions for a single civil service administrator in the original reorganization program, declared there is no necessity for dealing with civil service in the Administration's reorganization program.

"I already have introduced a bill to cover employes of all Federal agencies into the classified civil service," Ramspeck said. "The reorganization bill can do no more. If it attempts to abolish the present Civil Service Commission, I am convinced the House will reject it."

Program Was Shelved

The reorganization program, pigeonholed last session by the House after a fight rivaling the Administration's court plan defeat in intensity, was one of two new items of general legislation requested by the President in his opening message to Congress. The other was rail relief legislation.

The resolution introduced yesterday by Cochran would reconstitute the nine-man reorganization committee of which the Missourian was chairman, and give it authority to bring privileged reorganization legislation to the floor.

Warren, chairman of a sub-committee of the old group charged strictly with reorganization features of the program, last session succeeded in pushing his measure to House passage, only to have the program overturned when an omnibus Senate bill came back to the House for action. He has been consulted by the President several times since.

To Overcome Opposition

The North Carolinian's present strategy is believed aimed at overcoming opposition to specific features of the original program—such as provision for a single administrator, curtailment of the comptroller general's audit powers and authority for the President to issue merger orders without an effective Congressional majority vote checkmate.

In the Senate, Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, has promised to co-operate in behalf of the

'Bandana Bandit,' Accomplice Get 15 to 30 Years Here

The college-educated "bandana bandit," Edward Fullam, 23, was sentenced to prison for 15 to 30 years by Justice Proctor yesterday in District Court. A like sentence was imposed on Fullam's lookout man, John Bartholomew, 22.

Both men pleaded guilty to five charges of robbery and were sentenced to three to six years for each crime. Justice Proctor ordered that the sentences run consecutively.

The hope that others will be deterred from such crimes is one of his principal reasons for severe sentences in violent crimes, Justice Proctor said recently. He said that he hoped the long prison terms given robbers, holdup men and others would convince the young that crime did not pay and that the eventual reckoning wiped out anything the young criminal might enjoy, for a time, in the way of "easy money."

Air Force Increase First Proposal in President's Plan For Rearmament

See "Guam as a Diplomatic Instrument," by Walter Lippman, Page 9.

A bill authorizing the Army to increase its air strength from 2,320 to 6,000 planes was presented to the House yesterday as the first legislative move breathing life into the President's $552,000,000 special rearmament program.

The proposal, introduced by Chairman May of the Military Affairs Committee, followed on the heels of a warning by Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, that an "emergency" necessitated completion in two years of the expansion of American air forces recommended by President Roosevelt. The witness declined to give public explanation of the details of the "emergency."

Craig Outlines Needs

On the other side of the Capitol, the Senate Military Affairs Committee heard Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff, outline defense needs that will result in a nine-point legislative program, involving:

1. Increase in the number of planes—as provided in the May bill;
2. Increase personnel in the Air Corps and other related branches of the Army;
3. Increase in the number of reserve officers to go on duty with the Air Corps;
4. Augmented training of Air Corps personnel in civilian schools;
5. Training of civilian instructors in Army air schools;
6. Greater number of training planes to be assigned civilian schools;
7. Housing expansion in the Canal Zone;
8. Broadened powers for the Army procurement section to strengthen regulations on bidding;
9. Additional "educational" orders to train manufacturers in specialized work.

Agreement on Bills

Representative May told The Post last night that he and Chairman Sheppard of the Senate committee had agreed on various bills to be presented to both Houses to give effect to the President's program.

Decrying the "reckless, random methods" of former years, May said he looked for a "uniform program" and that his plane-increase bill was a "starter." He predicted it would be reported out to the House by the middle of next week.

May added that before the end of this week he would introduce bills strengthening American anti-aircraft defense and the Coast Guard.

At the same time, Representative Dan R. McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, offered a bill authorizing the Secretary of War—in accordance with general suggestions in the President's special message—to lend planes and equipment to

Madrid Ships Troops To Aid of Barcelona

Chamberlain Balks On Lifting Embargo; Communists Protest

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Jan. 18.—Prime Minister Chamberlain tonight rejected demands that he lift the embargo on the supply of arms and ammunition to the Barcelona government to aid it in repelling Gen. Francisco Franco and his Italian helpers.

Such a change of policy, Chamberlain said, would enlarge the Spanish war with "very grave" consequences.

Apparently the prime minister has been convinced by Rome and Berlin that they mean business, and will risk a world war if necessary to keep France or Britain from intervening in Spain. Chamberlain has already obtained assurances from France that it will not increase its aid to Barcelona.

All indications are that Chamberlain, in pursuit of appeasement, is waiting patiently for the triumph of Gen. Franco's forces, so that Premier Mussolini and Chamberlain, Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Daladier will be in a position to make a deal over Spain as they did over Czecho-Slovakia last September.

This does not inevitably foreshadow a partition of Spain, but it would involve a check on Spanish independence and perhaps a division of spheres of interest among the "Big Four" powers.

Britain is particularly anxious to protect its present "sphere" at

Franco Navy in Wait for Transports; 60,000 to Be Sent

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Spanish government was reported tonight to have ordered 60,000 soldiers shifted from the Madrid front to the defense of Catalonia—a move involving a perilous journey by sea to skirt Gen. Franco's Mediterranean salient.

Advices reaching the French border said 12,000 men already had been moved to Valencia, where they embarked for the northeastern segment of the divided government territory.

Insurgent and government man power in the present struggle for Catalonia has been about evenly matched, with the number on each side estimated at 300,000. Insurgents, however, hold a decided advantage in planes, artillery and other equipment.

Franco was concentrating his fleet off the coast of Catalonia and increasing his air patrol of coastal waters, heightening the threat to any mass transportation of government troops by sea.

The naval concentration, disclosed last week, had been planned primarily to blockade Barcelona and starve the threatened government capital into submission while Franco's troops drew closer from the west and southwest and attempted to cut Catalonia off from France.

Franco's headquarters charged 226 tons of war materials entered gov-

Hitler May Demote Goebbels, Elevate Goering in Shake-up

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 18.—Propaganda Minister Goebbels returned to his desk today after an illness of several weeks, but persistent rumors said he would leave it soon for a new post—perhaps that of chief Nazi district leader—in a general reshuffling of high Nazi officials.

(Late in December critics of Goebbels' tactics in the November anti-Jewish campaign said he had failed to avert foreign criticism and that a change was coming whereby he would be divested of his propaganda functions.)

The rumors, which official sources declined to confirm or deny, also were that Field Marshal Goering would become vice chancellor and war minister, positions that would enhance his place as No. 2 Nazi.

Dr. Wilhelm Frick, interior minister, would be retired on a pension, according to these reports. It was said Heinrich Himmler, chief of German police and the black-uniformed S. S. Elite Guards, might succeed him.

These reports circulated among usually well-informed men who see in such moves, if made, a continuation of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's policy of balancing radicals and moderates. If the Goering appointment could be regarded as a victory for the moderates, Himmler's elevation

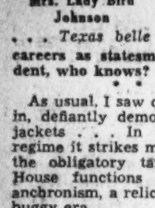
Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

At a rough estimate, about half of the 500 members of Congress who went to the White House reception the other evening, went in rented tailcoats. They paid around $3 to $4 for the evening, which included more or less of a fitting . . . Most Congressmen wait until their second terms before buying a suit of tails. By that time they're sure they're embarked on careers as statesmen, maybe president, who knows?



Mrs. Lady Bird Johnson

. . . Texas belle

* * * *

As usual, I saw quite a few sneak in, defiantly democratic, in dinner jackets . . . In this ultra-liberal regime it strikes me the survival of the obligatory tailcoat for White House functions is a bit of an anchronism, a relic of the horse and buggy era.

* * * *

Probably the most fantastic costume ever assembled in Washington was once donned by a Senator from Maine for a solemn occasion: A tailcoat, with the black vest from a dinner suit, and striped pants usually worn with a cutaway, topped off by an ordinary striped necktie; it was a wondrous combination of all four costumes a man can wear.

"—$4 for an evening's elegance"

At the White House dinner for Vice President Garner they trotted out the gold plates. Maybe that was President Roosevelt's little joke.

At the Jackson Day dinner F. D. R. had pointed out that Jackson, the reformer, was succeeded by Van Buren, the opportunist politician. Now, 100 years later, the idealists are fighting a dubious battle with the realists.

It was aristocratic Van Buren who installed the gold dishes at the White House; and then he was beaten for re-election by "Tippecanoe and Tyler Too," men of the people. It does sound like a Rooseveltian parable. But maybe Mrs. Roosevelt was just using her best dishes.

* * * *

POTOMAC PIFFLE: I learn with pleasure that the handsomest of the Texas Congressmen, Lyndon Johnson, is married to a Texas belle whose name is Lady Birc . . . Civilians can't understand why Army men say "materiel" instead of "material" . . . Because they mean equipment . . . When Germany, Italy and Japan sign their military pact the Japs must, of course, be recognized as full-blooded Aryans. . . . Frankfurter made it quite plain that he'd rather stay at Harvard than eat humble pie at his hearing.

In the cloakroom of the House, humor of the two-fisted variety popped up again yesterday, as members took refuge from their colleagues' speeches.

"Now that Mooney is out of prison," said a GOP member, "it's a good thing there aren't any Supreme Court vacancies to which he might be nominated."

Several members are claiming this wisecrack as their own. It's a sample of the strong humors of the day.

"—a joke on the Hill"

Also, Mrs. Roosevelt was at the theater the other evening when an actor began a speech with "Your Majesty——."

"Why," whispered a Republican wag who was sitting near the First Lady, "does he say 'Your Majesty' when it's Mrs. Roosevelt who's here?"

* * * *

But the Democrats, with the arguments about the cut in the relief bill going on, and the plans going forward to send food to Spain, revived one of the wows of the early thirties, in retaliation.

"Certainly Mr. Hoover and his friends are in favor of feeding people," they say, "so long as the people to be fed live outside this country."

CAPITAL CHATTER: By a handsome blond at the Carlton lounge: "I've just spent a year in Europe, and I say all dictators are lice" . . . The amplifying system in the House was not turned on till the day after President Roosevelt delivered his message . . . With the contraption on, citizens in the galleries can now hear what the statesmen on the floor are yelling about . . . Quite a few of the WPA staff here fell down because Mr. Hopkins went over to Commerce. They argue that the relievers need him worse than the businessmen.

Gov. Price Tells How Planning Aided Virginia

Wallace Urges More Consumption of Milk At Conference Here

Savings of millions of dollars and increased efficiency in the State and local governments of Virginia now in progress as a result of the establishment of a State planning board by the 1938 Legislature were described to Federal and State officials at the Mayflower Hotel last night by Gov. James H. Price.

Gov. Price preceded Frederic A. Delano, vice chairman of the National Resources Committee, at a dinner meeting that wound up the first day's session of the fourth General Assembly of the Council of State Governments, attended by about 300 delegates.

The Virginia executive traced the development of such work in his State beginning in 1933 until it eventuated in the creation of the State board last year, with an appropriation of $50,000 to cover its work over the biennium. He also described the operation of a legislative advisory council which engages in preliminary research work on legislation and assists in the preparation of bills.

$300,000 Saving on Busses

"Comprehensive planning increases efficiency and saves money," he said. "The State board estimated that $300,000 could be saved annually by proper routing of school busses. Counties that have tried their recommendations have saved more than was predicted.

"The board found a saving of $2,000,000 was possible on highways and $1,000,000 in the operation of the school system.

"Virginia has laws covering municipal and county planning, which have an essential connection with State planning. Co-ordinated planning is being done with regard to the Potomac River with West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District of Columbia. Local planning boards are doing excellent work in relation to the metropolitan area of Washington, which includes Maryland and Virginia.

"It is my intention to maintain even closer touch with the national planning board—the National Resources Committee, which Congress should see is well-staffed for the important work it is called on to do."

Vice chairman Delano of the committee declared that if that body had not been able to do anything more than to procure such cooperation from the States as Gov. Price described, its work had been worth while.

At the afternoon session of the Council Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace revealed under questioning hat there is at least one kind of product raised on the farm that the Department of Agriculture does not believe in curtailing as part of its plan of national planning.

"When nearly 50 million children are getting less than a glass of milk a day and when the people of the city need nearly 50 per cent more dairy products," the Secretary shot at former Senator Earl Leverich, of Wisconsin, "I do not think there is any fundamental reason for using Federal power to cut down the production of foods so desirable in the diet.

"I feel," he added, "that the sound dairy approach is a program of co-operation to bring about increased consumption of dairy products."

His response was evoked by a statement from the former Wisconsin Senator that the dairymen of his State considered they were "forgotten men" in the general Government program of crop control

"I recognize," the Secretary answered him, "that the dairy lobby is the most powerful lobby in Washington, and we treat it with respect on that account. But we have done more for the dairy farmers, without the dairy farmers giving us a quid pro quo in terms of toil and trouble than for any other agricultural group in the country."

As evidence he mentioned the action of the Surplus Commodity Administration in buying up last year 120,000,000 pounds of butter and, by taking it off the market for distribution to relief families, holding the price of butter to 25 cents a pound, when it would have gone, he said, to 16 cents or 17 cents. He also cited a large appropriation used to take diseased cows out of use.

One other question evoked a fiery response from the Secretary, after he had finished his prepared address. It was from Senator R. G. Kinkle, of Tennessee, who asked whether the price of cotton is controlled from Liverpool.

"It is determined more on the total supply of cotton in the world," the Secretary stated. "The quicker we get away from the thought that some malign personal devil is the cause of our troubles, the quicker we will get away from our troubles.

"When Germany is taking a million bales less cotton, England half a million less, and Japan 800,000 instead of 1,500,000," he added, "that is something real to think about instead of believing that a group of English spinners are trying to do you dirt."

Wallace, in a carefully prepared address, outlined the general program of Federal farm relief, and its relation to State agencies. His subject was one of four major ones to be considered during their four days' session by more than 300 State legislators and administrative officers in attendance at the annual assembly.

In his opening address at the morning session, Gov. Robert L. Cochran, of Nebraska, council president, touched on another. It was the problem of discriminatory trade barriers between States.

On Capitol Hill

By the Associated Press.

The House Ways and Means Committee will begin public hearings on social security act changes February 1. Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, said the doors would be opened to all interested persons, including Dr. Francis E. Townsend.

Dr. Townsend

Townsend said the President's message to Congress on social security was "unsatisfactory to the millions of elderly people in dire poverty" and "shows a lack of understanding of the problem confronting the Nation."

The Senate Banking Committee approved yesterday the nomination of Edward C. Eicher, former Iowa Congressman, to be a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

It also reported favorably the nominations of Franklin W. Hancock, jr., of North Carolina, to be a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and F. F. Hill, of New York, to be governor of the Farm Credit Administration.

Representative Barton (Republican), New York, commenting today on President Roosevelt's request for renewal of work on the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy tidal harnessing project in Maine, suggested that the New Deal change the course of the Gulf stream to make it flow north around New York and New England.

"This would be just as practical as Passamaquoddy," he said, "and would give Maine and Vermont summer weather all winter whether the Governor of Vermont wanted it or not.

"In fact, if you use New Deal bookkeeping, you can figure that the increased admissions at the World's Fair would pay for the whole project."

Southern and Western House members will meet tomorrow to discuss interterritorial freight rates. Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, author of a bill seeking rate equality, said he had invited 226 members.

$800,000,000 Padding Laid To Transamerica at Hearing

of the banking empire, had realized through dividends on Pacific Coast Mortgage Co. stock "profits" from deals in Transamerica stock amounting to approximately $350,000 for 1935, 1936 and 1937.

Stanley fied an objection to the amendment declaring that it "shows on its face that it is frivolous, irrelevant and is an unwarranted personal attack on Mr. A. P. Giannini, having nothing whatsoever to do with the issues of this proceeding."

After the hearing, Giannini issued a statement saying the $800,000,000 valuation above book value given the stocks on Transamerica books represented "assets which were exchanged at their actual cost," and included "good will" built up by the companies.

Stanley objected during the hearing to introduction of figures showing the higher stock valuation, but was overruled by Fitts. Pinch-hitting for Donald R. Richberg, chief Giannini counsel, who was absent due to illness, he characterized the valuation figures as "irrelevant."

He said the higher valuation represented the prevailing market prices of the stocks, which were acquired by Transamerica in taking over ownership and control of 10 concerns, including Bank of Italy National Trust and Savings Association, San Francisco, predecessor of Bank of America. Transamerica issued its own stock in exchange for the acquired stocks. Comparative market prices, Stanley said, were the basis for the exchange.

Questioning W. L. Andrews, treasurer of Transamerica, Rogge brought out that the company set up on its books at a value of $650,000,000 stock which it had acquired in Bancitaly Corporation, another holding company, although the stock had a book value of only $281,740,237.

Stock of Bank of Italy, and of National Bankitaly Co., its securities affiliate, was set up at a value of approximately $453,000,000, it was disclosed, although the value assigned the stock on the books of the bank itself was only about $193,000,000.

The valuation given the stocks of these concerns, Rogge pointed out, was $628,000,000 greater than the value shown on their books.

Andrews said A. O. Stewart, who resigned some months ago as chairman of the board of the San Francisco Federal Reserve Bank, was president of the Pacific Coast Mortgage Co.

Rogge charged that profits by the company on deals in Transamerica stock were due to "special knowledge" of Transamerica's affairs imparted to the company by A. P. Giannini.

U. S. Could Cut Prices, Wallace Warns World

Points to Nations' Benefit By Crop Control as He Urges 'Shared' Markets

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace hinted broadly yesterday that unless foreign nations producing cotton agreed to share world cotton markets the United States might resort to economic measures to protect the interests of its farmers.

The Secretary told newsmen after a visit to the White House that President Roosevelt believed the time was ripe for an international conference on cotton.

A similar conference on wheat was suggested by representatives of major wheat-producing nations meeting in London last week.

At present American cotton exports are 40 per cent below a year ago while those of competing nations are increasing.

Control Bolsters Prices

Wallace declared there was "world concern" over present low prices for the staple. He asserted, however, that those prices would be even lower except for this country's farm program embodying production control and loans to growers withholding surpluses from markets.

Stating that foreign growers had benefited by price-bolstering effects of this program, the Secretary expressed the belief that its abandonment would be gravely disturbing to world markets.

An international conference, he said, might draft agreements under which export markets would be divided on an "equitable" basis among all nations. Agreements of this kind, he said, would make it possible to eliminate international price-cutting and dumping and thereby help restore prices.

Regardless of what course foreign nations take, he said, the United States is determined to do all it can to hold on to its share of foreign markets. Officials said subsidization of exports might be resorted to as a means of holding such markets.

Wallace was asked if this country would engage in a dumping program of its surplus cotton—11,000,000 bales of which are stored under Government loans—if other countries did not co-operate on an international program. He said the Administration had no plans of this kind.

More Subsidies Urged

Turning to the problem of restoring a $1,000,000,000 loss in the income of American farmers in 1938, Wallace declared additional subsidies were necessary beyond the $485,000,000 in soil conservation payments recommended in the President's budget message.

He told reporters the Agriculture Department and the White House were in "remarkable accord" on his recommendation for taxes to provide money for additional subsidies.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference Tuesday that processing taxes tended to depress consumer buying power. In his budget message the Chief Executive advised that any new taxes for the farm program be "selected from the standpoint of avoiding repressive effects on purchasing power."

Fight Expected Today in Senate Over Hopkins

Bailey, Abstaining From Vote, to Report On Relief Politics

A bitter fight by the Republican minority against confirmation of Harry L. Hopkins as Secretary of Commerce was expected in the Senate today, following indorsement of the former WPA administrator yesterday by a strictly partisan 13-to-6 vote of the Commerce Committee.

The only member of the committee who failed to cast his ballot yesterday was the chairman, Senator Bailey, of North Catolina. Declaring that he had disqualified himself from voting "on personal grounds," Bailey said he would file a report with the Senate today, explaining his action and giving reasons for disapproval of Hopkins.

Bailey said his 3,000-word report would delve into the subject of "politics in relief" and into the attribution to Hopkins of the statement, "We will spend and spend, tax and tax, and elect and elect."

Six Republicans Vote "No"

Except for Bailey, all Democratic members of the committee voted approval of Hopkins, and the six Republican members—Senators McNary, Johnson (California), Vandenberg, White, Gibson and Barbour—noted "no."

The committee postponed taking a ballot until publication of the transcript of the three-day hearings on Hopkins' nomination. The full account makes a booklet of 144 pages.

Confirmation Conceded

When the Senate convenes at noon today it is expected that the Republicans will launch their first serious attack of the session against a Democratic measure. Although it is conceded that Hopkins will be confirmed, the Republicans hope to rally about 20 of their 23 members against him. Several conservative Democratic Senators also are scheduled to vote with the minority.

Republican Senators Davis, Reed, Johnson and White and Democratic Senator Holt are among those who are expected to provide a flood of boiling anti-Hopkins oratory.

The affirmative vote of the Commerce Committee will be reported by Senator Sheppard, Texas Democrat, who, after Bailey, is senior majority member of the committee.

Sheppard was chairman of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, which unearthed most of the evidence of "politics in relief" on which the anti-Hopkins campaign has been based.

Willkie Parley Expected

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Some leading industrialists predicted today that Senatorial confirmation of Harry Hopkins as Secretary of Commerce would be followed by a series of conferences between Hopkins and nationally known business leaders, if present plans are carried out.

One of the first conferences, these sources said, is expected to be between Hopkins and Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, who has waged a running battle with the New Deal over the Tennessee Valley Authority power project.

Purported emissaries of good will have told Willkie, the sources continued, that Hopkins wishes not only to work out a permanent demarcation of Willkie's private power operations and TVA's power district that will be mutually satisfactory, but hopes in so doing to make a convincing demonstration that the Government hereafter "will keep out of business."

Willkie, they said, has in reply indicated he would enter without any previous reservations or prejudices into such discussions, if he is formally asked by Hopkins.

Superior Radio Tube Kept Off Market, Trust Quiz Told

Bell System President Tells Inquiry It Was Perfected Years Ago but Not Sold Because It Was Not to Manufacturer's 'Advantage'

By the Associated Press.

The monopoly committee heard yesterday that manufacturers of radio tubes, if they desired, could offer a greatly improved product that would have much longer life and consume far less current.

Frank B. Jewett, president of the Bell Telephone laboratories, said the laboratories had developed such a vacuum tube about 15 years ago, but so far as he knew no manufacturer had ever offered it for use.

"It would not be to their commercial advantage to do it," he remarked.

"I know that if I was in their place I wouldn't do it."

He explained that the new tube had 50 times the life of the tube used before 1923, consumed only half as much current and was somewhat less costly to manufacture.

Richard C. Patterson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce and a member of the investigating committee, commented, "I can see how they would sell less tubes all right."

Jewett had testified that under a cross-licensing agreement Radio Corportaion of America and General Electric Corporation had the right to use the invention. The Bell system has used them in another form for long distance telephone communications.

The general policy of the Bell system, Jewett said, was to "grant licenses broadly," on the 15,000 patents it holds.

Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, said he could not understand why "someone is foregoing the opportunity of making millions" by not manufacturing the longer-life tube.

The Bell tube is manufacturel by the Wsetern Electric Co., a subsidiary, and Chairman O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, wanted to know why "Western Electric doesn't develop and manufacture in the radio field this perfectly marvelous discovery."

Jewett said he did not know whether the cross licensing agreement between R. C. A. and General Electric prevented Western Electric from manufacturing radio tubes.

The improved vacuum tube, Jewett testified, had saved the Bell system $10,000,000 last year, but had cut Western Electric's production to one-fiftieth of the number of old-style tubes that would have been needed.

Bootlegger Pleads Guilty In Auto Deaths

He Faces Life Term; Accomplice Admits Conspiracy Charge

Two bootleggers, whose automobile destroyed two lives when a wreck ended their 80-mile-an-hour flight from revenue agents, pleaded guilty yesterday before Justice Laws, one to murder and the other to conspiracy and bootlegging.

Charles Sumner Lee, jr., 36, colored, who was driving the car, faces a prison term of 20 years to life for second-degree murder. He also pleaded guilty to conspiracy, 4 to 24 months, and bootlegging, one to five years.

Worsey Penn Dorsey, 33, colored, the other defendant, faces only the conspiracy and bootlegging terms. Assistant District Attorney Boyce dismissed the murder indictment against him.

Killed in the chase were 2-year-old Muriel Lanham, 526 Ninth street southeast, and Marion Wood, 19, of 510 Tenth street southeast. The child was found on top of a parked automobile and Wood was found in the street, while their car burned last September 2. Both died in hospitals in a few days.

The estates of the victims have sued Lee and Ella Walker, alleged owner of the car, for $10,000 for each life.

McLean Haled To District Court In Estate Suit

Edward B. McLean, who is confined in a Baltimore mental hospital, yesterday was ordered by Justice Laws to appear in District Court here and defend his interests in litigation over administration of the $10,000,000 McLean estate by court-appointed guardians.

Justice Laws recently halted a lawsuit between Attorney Austin F. Canfield, McLean's guardian at law, and Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, committee for the estate, over whether Bristol's appointment by a Maryland court was valid when McLean had no property in Maryland and did not live there when he was declared incompetent. Laws said the action could not go on until McLean was legally notified.

Should McLean fail to appear, the court indicated he would consider it proper to go on without him.

C. of C. Group Plans Study of Postal Rail Plan

ICC Asks Congress For 'Mandate' to Investigate Idea

The third meeting of the National Transportation Conference, set up last September by the United States Chamber of Commerce to develop a businessman's program to improve the railroad situation, will convene in Washington Monday for a two-day session.

Among other questions, the conference will pass judgment upon the desirability of creating a new transportation authority, and will decide whether it desires to take a position on any proposal to "postalize" railroad rates.

Will Be Submitted to Congress

Findings of the conference, representing a cross-section of business opinion for railroad betterment, will be submitted to Congress for consideration in connection with pending railroad legislation.

Meanwhile Marion M. Caskie, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, suggested that Congress order it to make an extensive investigation of a plan to "postalize" railroad passenger fares. In a letter to Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and chairman of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, he suggested that Congress present the I. C. C. with a mandate by joint resolution to investigate the proposals. Caskie's letter said:

"It is quite evident that the plan contemplates a very revolutionary change in the methods of charging for railroad passenger service, and adequate replies to the inquiries contained in your letter would require an extensive investigation. It appears Mr. Hastings proposes the Federal Government guarantee the railroads against loss. This is in itself an indication of the essentially experimental nature of the plan.

Hastings Indorses Study

Hastings, author of the plan, issued a statement saying that "I am heartily in agreement with the request for a Congressional study."

Colored Lawyer Files Suit to Make Bar Library Move

Huver I. Brown, a colored attorney, sued yesterday to compel the District Bar Association to give up the quarters occupied by its library in the courthouse because the public is not allowed to use the books.

Brown asserted that the $852,000 building was erected for Government purposes and that the bar association is a private corporation, which maintains an extensive law library there "for members only."

Colored attorneys are not members of the association. Brown offered to prove that he and other colored lawyers have been excluded from the library.

Brown acted as his own counsel. With him was associated James G. Tyson.

France Agrees To Keep Hands Off in Spain

Bows to British; May Seize Minorca If Franco Wins

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Jan. 18.—The French cabinet bowed to British pressure today and decided to reject demands that the Pyrenees frontier be thrown open to the passage of supplies for the Spanish Republicans and to continue to observe the policy of non-intervention.

The cabinet also approved the outline of the speech Foreign Minister Bonnet will deliver in the Chamber of Deputies on Friday. He is expected to stress maintenance of the policy of absolute neutrality toward the Spanish civil war, and vigilant defense of the French colonial empire and France's Mediterranean communications.

The cabinet was said to have decided to stake its life on possible loss of her support. Bonnet was reported to have declared Britain's friendship would cool if France opened the border.

To Play Up Withdrawal Promise

Bonnet, in his speech, will play up Premier Mussolini's pledge to Prime Minister Chamberlain to withdraw his Italian legionnaires as soon as Gen. Francisco Franco has completed his conquest of Spain.

But the realistic French general staff is aware that Il Duce is in the habit of forgetting his pledges when it suits his interests. According to current reports, French military authorities are contemplating taking certain guarantees if Franco captures Barcelona and cuts off Republican Spain from the French frontier.

These are said to be occupation of Minorca to offset Mussolini's hold on the other Balearic island—Majorca—as well as the occupation of Spanish Morocco.

Paris believes that as soon as Franco achieves his final victory—which the Italians are confident will be in the near future—installation of Italian military forces and airplanes in Majorca and along the Pyrenees frontier will be the pawns that Il Duce will use in his diplomatic chess game against the French. Anxious to forestall Mussolini's game, Premier Daladier and the French military authorities are already planning measures to be taken to checkmate this menace to French Mediterranean communications.

In the course of the foreign affairs debate in the Chamber of Deputies, former Premier Leon Blum plans to introduce a resolution calling for the end of nonintervention, and the reopening of the Pyrenees frontier. This resolution may create an awkward situation for the government, for many of Daladier's own radical party are sympathetic to this proposal.

Writing in the Socialist organ "Le Populaire" today, Blum recalls how Mussolini strongly promised at the end of 1936 not to send arms to Spain. Yet today, Italian divisions and Italian airplanes, tanks and artillery are making possible the advance of the insurgent forces in Catalonia.

An imposing French naval demonstration began today in the Mediterranean, when some 70 warships of the combined Atlantic and Mediterranean fleets left Toulon to take part in maneuvers along the African coast from Tunis to Gibraltar. Another significant example of French determination to prepare for all eventualities is the dispatch of Gen. Maurice Gamelin, chief of staff of the French national defense, and Admiral Jean Darlan, chief of the naval staff, to North Africa for the second time within a month to inspect colonial coastal defenses in Algeria and Morocco.

Italian Troops at Border

Tunis, Tunisia, Jan. 18 (AP).—Reports of Italian troop concentrations along Tunsia's frontier with Italian Libya were received today by French officials.

Reinforcements were reported to have arrived from Italy at the end of December and the beginning of January, when an Italian campaign for territorial concessions from France was boiling.

Refugees from Libya said the Italian army requisitioned camels throughout Libya.

Loyalists Confident

Barcelona, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Gen. Juan Sarabia, commander in chief of the Catalonian army, announced tonight after a tour of the front lines that "the invaders are exhausted by the strain of nearly four weeks of fighting" and that Barcelona can enter her fight for life with confidence.

Sarabia's announcement came shortly after a war office communique announcing that the rebels were in retreat from positions at the southern end of the Catalonian front along the Mediterranean.

The loyalists holding positions beyond the coastal terminus of Barcelona's outer ring of fortifications were said to have been driven from Altafulla on the eastern bank of the Gaya River, but to have struck back in a counter-attack that not only recaptured Altafulla but Vertice San Antonio as well.

Three insurgent warships offshore joined the rebel attack, shelling government lines, and the battle was said to be continuing tonight.

Chamberlain Refuses to Lift Spain Embargo

London

Gibraltar, guarding the western gate of the Mediterranean.

Encouraged by renewed agitation in France and the United States for removal of the arms embargo, Labor, Liberal and Communist parties in this country today bombarded the prime minister with demands that he abandon nonintervention and give Barcelona all the guns it can buy or borrow.

The Labor leader, Maj. Clement Attlee, asked that Parliament be summoned to consider the situation at once instead of waiting until January 31.

Chamberlain replied that to reverse the nonintervention policy "would inevitably lead to the extension of the conflict with consequences which cannot be accurately foreseen, but which would undoubtedly be very grave . . ."

Famine Aid Studied

Taking up Attlee's warning of the danger of faminine in republican Spain, Chamberlain said Britain has been consulting with other governments and "particularly with the Government of the United States with a view to the possibility of concerting international help on the large scale contemplated by the Spanish government."

As a result of these consultations, Chamberlain said, "It seems clear that there is at present no chance of a scheme being organized on this basis, and such a scheme would in any case take a very long time to organize effectively. We have, however, joined with other governments in helping finance the work of unofficial organizations already in the field, and we propose to continue this policy."

Attlee called attention to Barcelona's grave plight and to the presence of Italian and German troops and munitions in Spain. Attlee argued it was inimical to the honor and interests of Britain to continue to deny to the Spanish republic the right freely to purchase arms and supplies essential for its defense.

Communists Repulsed

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—Mounted police today repulsed a crowd of several hundred persons said to be Communists, when they tried to break through police cordons guarding No. 10 Downing street, residence of the prime minister. They carried placards demanding "Arms for Spain."

A small deputation later was received at the foreign office.

Police reinforcements also were sent to Picadilly, where British Fascists demonstrated at the premiere of a film part of the proceeds of which were to go to the Lord Baldwin Fund for Jewish refugees from Germany.

Swift raids by police bomb squads today resulted in the seizure of large quantities of ammunition and explosives and the arrest of 14 young suspected members of the illegal Irish Republican army in connection with a series of explosions throughout the United Kingdom.

ernment Spain through the French frontier in December. Officially the French government has been keeping the frontier closed to such shipments.

The headquarters statement said December shipments from France also included 350 tons of merchandise, 4,738 tons of oil and gasoline, 25 tons of airplane materials, 28 planes, 76 Spanish pilots trained in Russia and 25 Mexican fliers.

Report Pons Taken

Insurgent armies today reported the capture of Pons, northern key to defenses of Barcelona, and further central and southern gains in the offensive designed to end the civil war.

Possession of Pons was said to have given Franco a road of attack toward the French frontier. Although Pons is 15 miles northwest of Barcelona it is only 55 miles from the French border and controls a main highway to the frontier.

Other troops in the center and south of the 100-mile front which goes all the way from the French border to the Mediterranean were attacking directly toward Barcelona.

The government army defending Barcelona has mountainous country in which to fight—always a help to defenders. The government has placed machine-gun nests on all mountain tops to pour a stream of bullets against attackers who must charge up the slopes.

The mountains go from the town of Igualada, 28 miles west of Barcelona, to the coast itself. Defenses near the coast, southwest of Barcelona, are the strongest, because to reach them the insurgents must cross the Gaya River.

Insurgents Cross River

Today one insurgent army was said to have crossed the Gaya at several points near the Mediterranean and only 40 miles from Barcelona.

The army in the center of the front was fighting its way toward Barcelona by the road which runs through Igualada. Because of its situation on this road, Igualada was termed the central key to Barcelona defenses.

Insurgents today reported the capture of several small villages near Igualada. Tonight they were said to be within 4 miles of that town.

Many refugees from areas between the insurgents and Barcelona have been crossing the frontier into France.

Some of these were deserters who were disarmed and sent into insurgent territory at their own request. Others, mostly women and children, were fleeing Barcelona to avoid acute food shortage or the danger of fighting reaching the capital.

Mexico Seen Promoting Oil Sales to Reich

Return of Minister To Berlin Linked to Petroleum Seizures

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, Jan. 18.—The departure of Gen. Juan Azcarate to resume his post as Mexican minister to Berlin was interpreted in some circles here today as indicating efforts to expand Mexican-German trade relations.

Officially, it was said to be merely in conformity with the recently adopted practice of increasing Mexican diplomatic representation.

Some observers expressed belief that a recent $17,000,000 barter transaction for disposing of oil from wells expropriated from American and British companies, most of which is going to Germany, has encouraged Mexico to press for an expansion of its oil sales to the Reich.

Gen. Azcarate was military attache of the Mexican Embassy in Washington until August 27, 1935.

Deny Military Purchases

Military men doubted rumors Mexico was planning to buy military supplies from Germany. They said Mexico has an arms factory that is now operating to capacity.

The oil barter arrangement has given a tremendous stimulus to trade with Germany. A number of United States business representatives said their sales have fallen sharply.

[Frank L. Kluckhohn, New York Times correspondent expelled by Mexico, declared yesterday:

["I found out too much about the activities of Mexican oil exports and other affairs in connection with the Mexican government's oil deal in Germany."

[Kluckhohn said a United Press correspondent had been warned that "there is no interest in the outside world about Mexican deals with Germany."]

Trade Pact With Brazil

Berlin, Jan. 18 (AP).—The German news service Dienst aus Deutschland said today that an improved and extended system of bartering merchandise between Germany and Brazil was planned.

The service added that Germany was expecting big cotton shipments from northeastern Brazil and that German yards would be busy soon on shipbuilding orders from Rio de Janeiro.

Loyalists' Hero Wrecks 3 Tanks With Dynamite

Barcelona, Jan. 18 (AP).—This threatened capital of government Spain rejoiced today over the exploits of a dynamite-throwing army corporal credited with wrecking three insurgent tanks and turning back 11 others.

Garcia Moreno met two tank attacks singlehanded in the Santa Coloma sector and his success with crude dynamite bombs was so great he was brought back to receive the congratulations of Premier Negrin.

Discussing his technique, the corporal said he threw his dynamite under the fuel tanks, thus disabling the machines and at the same time causing smoke and flames to blind the crews.

would please the more radical Nazis.

Goebbels had been away from his office shortly before Christmas. It was announced officially December 22 that he was suffering from an intestinal ailment. Recently he spent several days at Hitler's mountain home near Berchtesgaden.

In the rumored shift Goebbels would move out of the propaganda ministry into a position as Obergauleiter, which would put him above all other district Nazi leaders, and be appointed governor of the Greater Berlin district, retaining his status as cabinet minister.

The propaganda ministry, which he has headed since the Nazis assumed power January 30, 1933, would be attached directly to the federal chancellory, it was said, with Secretary of State Otto Dietrich, Hitler's personal press chief, in charge.

Foreign office men then would conduct relations with the foreign press representatives and Goering would assume the direction of theaters, motion pictures and radio now in Goebbels' hands.

Goering is head of the four-year economic self-sufficiency plan and air minister, and holds several minor titles.

The vice chancellorship has been vacant since Franz von Papen was made special Ambassador to Austria in 1934. The position of war minister became vacant when Field Marshal Von Blomberg resigned in February, 1938.

Bombing Won't Win War, Says Envoy to China

product of Friends School and George Washington University here, declared the Japanese war in China will last "a long, long time."

"The morale of the Chinese people is high," he said. "They are full of hope. There is no particular discouragement. Life is going on pretty much as it went on before the war."

His comment that aerial bombs do not win wars despite the terror they are designed to create was backed by his description of the devastation wrought in Nanking.

"First would come the alarm," he said, "and all who could obtained cover. Then the bombs would fall. There would be a period of silence; then the people would hurry out, remove the debris and carry away the bodies. Reconstruction attempts were not of a permanent character, they were not made with any expectation that the same thing wouldn't happen again the next day."

That simply did he describe reaction to attempts from the air to crush the spirit of civilians.

Johnson is the fourth ambassador to troubled capitals of the world now in Washington while the Nation's foreign relations and defense problems are uppermost in the minds of top Administration and Congressional figures.

There was speculation last night on whether he might not be called before the Naval Affairs Committees on the Hill to help legislators forge the defense program as it relates to the Pacific. The question of fortifying the island of Guam, only some 1,500 miles from Tokyo, is an important one at the Capitol.

Joseph P. Kennedy, ambassador to England, and William C. Bullitt, envoy to France, yesterday told the House and Senate military affairs committees, secretly, of alarming conditions in Europe. Hugh C. Wilson, ambassador to Berlin, likewise is here, pending a clarifying of strained relations between this country and Germany.

Johnson, a career diplomat, whose "shirt-sleeve" methods have brought him high regard in the Nation's foreign service, returned "the long way," motoring 2,100 miles to Rangoon, flying to London, and then taking a ship to New York.

He termed a "remarkable achievement" the construction of China's new "life-line highway over which he traveled from Cungking, the presetn Chinese capital, across Yunan Province to Burma, where it connects with a British road to Rangoon. The highway was constructed as a commercial and military outlet in eight months, thought without the aid of road building machinery of any kind.

He conferred yesterday with Secretary of State Hull and Stanley K. Hornbeck, adviser on political affairs and former chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs. He will see President Roosevelt soon, possibly today, and prior to his call at the White House declined to go into greater details on his observations throughout the Japanese conflict.

His return, however, comes at a time when this Government is seriously concerned over Japan's admitted intention to close the "open door" in China, long maintained by treaty to assure equal commercial opportunity for all countries there.

While the question of how long China can hold out against the invaders frequently is heard, Ambassador Johnson's observation that the war will last a long time is backed by other information here that the Chinese, by guerrilla tactics, though they lack the equipment needed to meet the Japanese in open battle, are inflicting severe punishment on their enemies.

With the dominant military group in Japan committed to complete conquest of China and crushing all occidental influences there, it is felt in Washington that no Japanese leader could bring acceptance of peace on lesser terms.

G. O. P. Chiefs To Hear Plan For Refugees

Proposal Would Use War Debts to Help Their Colonization

A proposal to mobilize the $11,000,000,000 defaulted war debts behind an organized Jewish migration from the dictator lands of Europe was presented to Republican leaders of the House and Senate yesterday by Charles S. Dewey, of Chicago, former American financial adviser to Poland.

Dewey, here after conferences Monday and Tuesday with bankers and party leaders in New York, will confer today with State Department attaches on details of the projected colonization finance bank.

Among those to whom Dewey presented the plan were Senator McNary, of Oregon, and Representative Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, Republican leaders; and William R. Castle, formerly Undersecretary of State, and now vice chairman of the Republican National Committee. Martin indicated he would lay the project before the majority leaders of the House as a step toward enlisting Administration support.

The Dewey proposal contemplates that the defaulting war-debt nations shall pay at least a part of their scheduled annual payments under existing agreements, to the United States Government in their own currencies, the payments to be pooled in a great fund of international exchange to finance orderly Jewish colonization in whatever parts of the world may be opened by the nations.

18,553 Undesired Aliens Deported By U. S. in 1938

By the Associated Press.

James L. Houghteling, commissioner of immigration, said yesterday that 18,553 aliens were forced to leave the United States last year.

Houghteling's annual report to Secretary of Labor Perkins said 9,275 of the aliens were deported on warrants and 9,278 others, who had been adjudged deportable, left at their own expense. The total leaving in the previous year was 17,617.

During the year ending last July immigration officers barred 8,066 aliens from entering.

Immigrant arrivals numbered 67,895, compared with 50,244 in 1937 and 36,329 in 1936. The total was still far below the quota of 153,774, Houghteling said.

Germans and Austrians, totaling 17,199, led immigrants from all other countries. A classification by races in the report designated 11,917 of the Germans as Jews.

Treasure Hunters Who Quit Ship Cleared of Mutiny

Los Angeles, Calif., Jan. 18 (AP).—A Federal grand jury heard more descriptions today of the treasure-hunting voyage of the schooner Metha Nelson into the outh Seas, then returned a "no bill" which cleared Charles Segal, Hollywood promoter, and Abraham Kapellner, a steward, of mutiny charges.

Marino Bello, stepfather of the late Jean Harlow and organizer of the cruise; Peggy Husby Bello, the nurse whom he married a few days after the ship cleared Los Angeles Harbor, and Richard Gulley, cousin of England's former foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, were questioned today.

Segal and Kapellner were arrested here several months ago by Federal agents. They left the vessel at a Mexican port, claiming Capt. R. B. Hoffman subjected them to persecution. This charge the captain denied.

U. S. Accuses Germany Again In Explosions

By the Associated Press.

Germany's denial of responsibility for the Black Tom and Kingsland, N. J., munitions disasters was characterized yesterday as a "dishonest defense."

William D. Mitchell, former Attorney General, told the Mixed Claims Commission that a postscript to a letter, written in January, 1917, had "ripped down completely the facade" of this defense. Mitchell is representing the United States in an effort to set aside a 1930 decision which found for Germany in sabotage claims totaling some $50,000,000.

The letter was alleged to have been written by Carl Ahrendt, now a representative of the North German Lloyd Line at Cleveland, and was addressed to a Paul Hilken. The postscript read:

"Your of the 18th just received and am delighted to learn that the Von Hindenburg of Roland Park won another victory. Had a note from March who is still at the McAlpin. Asks me to advise his brother that he is in urgent need of another set of glasses. He would like to see his brother as soon as possible on this account."

The American counsel contended the "Von Hindenburg of Roland Park" was Hilken himself, who lived in Roland Park, suburb of Baltimore, and that the "glasses" referred to glass incendiary tubes.

The letter was dated January 19, 1917, a week after Kingsland was destroyed by fire.

The Germans contend the "victory" meant a business success in connection with Hilken's work in furthering German commercial submarine activity with this country, and that the "glasses" meant money.

The letter was found last July in files of the Eastern Forwarding Co. at Baltimore. That company had been formed in connection with German commercial submarine efforts to run the British blockade.

Ahrendt appeared before the commission before the letter was found. Mitchell expressed regret he could not have confronted Ahrendt with the postscript.

First Defense Bill Asks for 3,680 Planes To Increase Air Force of Army to 6,000 land-grant colleges for the training of pilots.

Meanwhile, a Congressional fight loomed over the ticklish question of fortification of the island of Guam, American outpost in the Pacific 1,300 miles from Japan.

Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Committee, asserted that he had sent to the Budget Bureau a bill providing additional naval base facilities including a $5,000,000 authorization for fortifying Guam. When the proposal was first made public in a report issued by a special Navy board last week, criticism was heard on the grounds that fortification of the tiny island would greatly arouse Japan. Maj. Gen. William C. Rivers, former inspector general of the Army, has characterized it as a "most markedly aggressive and provocative military step."

Vinson Favors Fortification.

If the Guam item is eliminated by the Budget Bureau or the White House, Vinson said he would hold hearings to determine whether or not it should be restored before the measure reaches the floor of the House.

Vinson stated that although he favors the project, he would be unwilling to risk the success of the entire $44,000,000 naval base program by insisting upon it.

Senator Borah, returning to the Capitol from a White House luncheon, said he was convinced the United States would make no attempt, for the time bing, to fortify Guam.

The ranking Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee declard, in answer to a question, that he thought he was "in general agreement" with the President on the foreign situation.

In his testimony before the House Military Committee, Gen. Arnold said yesterday that, to complete the defenses of the continental United States, four major air bases should be constructed within the next two years: in Puerto Rico, Alaska, Florida and New Hampshire. He added that the base in Hawaii should be expanded.

Arnold told the committee privately that within three years, America's aircraft factories could be in a position to turn out 1,000 planes a month, quadrupling the present rate. Last week, the committee heard Ambassadors Kennedy and Bullitt, American envoys to Great Britain and France, mention 1,200 planes per month as the present German capacity.

Opposes Competitive Bids

To hasten an increase in productive capacity, Arnold suggested Congress permit abandonment of competitive bidding for private plane manufacture.

"We should do away with competitive bidding if we are in an emergency," said the Air Corps' chief. "I think right now we are faced with an emergency."

Representative Short, Missouri's lone Republican Congressman, asked Arnold whether an enemy power would not need air bases in Canada or Mexico before it could launch a successful attack on this country.

"Yes," was the reply, or floating bases."

"Do you think there is any immediate danger of such an attack?" asked Short.

"I don't think I should answer that," Arnold said.

Short declared later that Gen. Craig had agreed to answer the question—possibly today, in a secret session.

Asks $170,000,000 for Planes

Urging approval of the President's $300,000,000 air expansion program, Arnold told the committee that $170,000,000 would be spent for 3,000 new planes. He said the plans call for 2,000 new officers, and 25,000 additional enlisted men. He said when the program was completed the Army would have only 3,337 operating planes and indicated that the others would be used largely for training.

"Planes of five years ago, when the goal in speed development was 300 miles per hour, are now obsolete," said Arnold. "We are looking to 500 miles per hour."

Another angle of American defense plans was brought to the fore yesterday with the report that Secretary of War Woodring recommended to the Senate and House military committees Monday that bonds be issued to finance construction of an auxiliary channel and a third set of locks for the Panama Canal, probably to be located from 1 to 4 miles from the existing waterway.

The additional route—to be built primarily for military purposes—would be paid for, Woodring suggested, by a $200,000,000 bond issue. The bonds would be retired by application of over two-thirds of the canal's annual receipts of $13,000,000.

Vinson Offers Two Bills

The bill introduced by Representative May yesterday authorizes the Secretary of War to provide the Air Corps with not more than 6,000 "serviceable airplanes, and such number of airships and free and captive balloons as he may determine to be necessary for training purposes," together with essential equipment. The figure of 6,000 excludes experimental and obsolete planes. No time limit is set for the new construction.

Representative Vinson offered two bills yesterday, authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to modernize three ships at a cost not to exceed $5,000,000, and permitting the President to "acquire or convert" vessels to provide one seaplane tender, one destroyer tender, a fleet tug and an oiler at cost not to exceed $50,000,000.

Representative Fish, of New York, ranking minority member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, introduced a bill to forbid the exportation of implements of war, except to nations on the American continents engaged in war against non-American states.

On the floor of the House, Representative Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, sponsor of a bill authorizing nine East-West and North-South highways to cost $8,000,000,000, urged construction of the routes as a measure for cheaper transportation, relief of unemployment and national defense.

King and Hoover Attack Persecution Of Minorities

Cincinnati, Jan. 18 (AP).—Senator William A. King (Democrat), Utah, and former rPesident Herbert Hoover voiced criticism of minority persecutions here tonight.

King, speaking at a banquet of the biennial council of the American Hebrew Congregations, said he would support a measure for "non-intercourse with the Nazi government."

A message from Hoover to the council was read, in which he said the "'Jews are but part of those peoples the persecution of whom arises out of moral and political degeneration the world over."

Diplomats View Film From China

"Song of China," a Chinese produced motion picture, was presented last night for the first time in this country by the Washington Film Society to an audience in Pierce Hall which included diplomats from several nations.

A story of filial piety on the order of "The Good Earth," the film is devoid of war propaganda and is considered one of the best productions of the Chinese motion picture industry. Actors, technicians and directors were Chinese. The film society, of which Secretary Hull and several ambassadors are sponsors, hopes to present a Japanese production in the near future.

Fairfax Board Studies '39-'40 Budget

2 New Policemen Asked; D. C. Man Fined $500 In Auto Tragedy

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. BOX 248, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 2040-M.

The Fairfax County board of supervisors yesterday began its study of theannual county budget for 1939-40, which will be the basis of the county taxes payable next fall.

The tentative estimates considered yesterday were not formally adopted and included expenses and salaries in existing county offices and the police force. It included provisions for appointment of two members of county police. A similar move last year was defeated when the budget was finally adopted after a public hearing when one of the citizens opposed the increased appropriation, but was voted down by board members.

Thetentative estimates yesterday totaled approximately $120,700 for general county expenses exclusive of schools, pensions, fire levy and road debt service.

Other Items Considered

Considered by the board was $4,371 salary and expenses of the board of supervisors; $2,285 for salary and expenses of county purchasing agent; $8,266 for commissioner of revenue office; $75, examiner of records; $10,299, treasurer's office; $3,558, clerk's office; $3,298 for circuit court; $4,417 for trial justice court; $2,211, Commonwealth's Attorney's office; $25,170 for policing and investigating; '1,955, jail upkeep; $100, forest fires; $300, salary of county welfare board; $18,424.16 for maintenance of public welfare department; $3,595 for district poor farm and outside relief; $375, material for sewing room; $50 for coffins for poor; $400 for lunacy hearings; $6,750 for public health; $2,214 for farm and home agent; $2,110, elections; $7,690, maintenance of county buildings; $1,020, school superintendent; $175 for registrar of vital statistics; $4,000, capital outlay, and $2,000, emergency fund.

It was estimated that the tax rate for road debt service would remain at $1.35 in Dranesville District and 70 cents in Falls Church District, while in Providence District it would be 16 cents and Mount Vernon District, 15 cents, which will be a reduction of 1 cent in each district over the current rate. The fire protection levy and the Confederate pension levy would remain at 5 cents each. The real estate reassessment fund rate would be 4 cents.

Ask Clerk Hire Funds

A request was received from the county planning commission asking the board to appropriate $2,500 for clerk hire and supplies for the commission, which was created last fall and for which the county has never appropriated and funds. The request was made by E. Russell White, chairman of the commission.

A resolution was adopted setting aside $5,000 from the general county fund in a special account to be known as a real estate reassessment fund to take care of the general county assessment next year.

A resolution was received from the county school board asking allocation of more office space in the courthouse or if such space was not available the school board asked it be given the exclusive use of the county board room at all times except on board meeting days. It was brought out that since offices for the school board were allocated in 1928 the school board office force has increased from two persons to six, at present housed in two rooms.

The supervisors will consider the request of the school board and the adoption of a tentative county budget at its next meeting on February 1.

Both were in the rear seat when an auto Bezio was driving crashed through the ice. Miss Snow's body was recovered later when the auto was raised from nearly 14 feet of water. Bezio saved himself and four of his children from the car dead of winter and 200,000 more when the March winds are blowing," Borah said. "God knows what they are going to do unless they starve."

The C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor both were backing restoration of the cut and cities represented on the United States Conference of Mayors were bringing pressure to bear, as the sub-committee, predisposed to the House $725,000,000 figure, concluded its hearings.

Jobless Conditions Cited

Last witness before the sub-committee, Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, cited unemployment conditions in his State, and urged a "minimum" appropriation of the $875,000,000 asked by the President.

Chairman Glass of the Appropriations Committee is expected to lead the fight for the lower appropriation when the sub-committee meets today, but some other Democrats in the group who formerly espoused the House action yesterday were reported "doubtful." Only two of the three Republican members were regarded as sure votes for the cut.

The sub-committee draft of the bill providing WPA funds for the next five months will be written today, but must run the gauntlet of the 24-member Appropriations Committee, probably tomorrow, before it reaches the Senate floor.

Lehman Protests Cut

Among telegrams received by the Senate group yesterday from State and local officials opposing the cut was a wire from Gov. Lehman, of New York, declaring reduction of WPA rolls will force an "impossible burden" on New York State and New York cities.

An outlet for 9,000 trained domestic servants in Washington, and 404,000 throughout the country was estimated by Edgar G. Brown, of the United Government Employes, who asked the sub-comittee to earmark $10,000,000 for WPA training of domestic help.

Brown said he cited United States employment service estimates in support of his contention that domestic jobs are available if household training is provided by WPA. He said Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, and others expressed "gratification" at the job prospect picture he painted.

Other last day witnesses included Ralph Hetzell, unemployment director of the C. I. O.; President Jacob Baker, of the United Federal Workers of America; the Rev. David C. Colony, of St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Philadelphia; Abbott Simons, of the American Youth Congress; William Dixon, Ohio State director of relief, and William Levner, of the American Federation of Teachers.

Schultze, Drawer Of 'Foxy Grandpa,' Dies at 72 on WPA

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Carl E. Schultze, the comic artist who caricatured his own grandfather as "Faxy Granda," engenuous, kindly and sly, died in his sleep today at 72.

The wealth he had acquired thrrough two decades as one of the Nation's most popular newspaper comic strip artists before the ascendancy of gun-toting, crafty and heroic characters, had long since vanished, and in recent years Schultze had worked for the WPA.

He began drawing for newspapers in the nineties, but it was not until 900 that "Foxy Grandpa" brought him fame and a fortune, lost after the war.

Gen. Dawes Believes Europe Is on Way To a Lasting Peace

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Former Vice President Charles G. Dawes today said he believed Europe was on the way to a permanent peace.

He listed as favorable factors the "fear and hatred of war" among the European peoples and the Munich compact, which, he said, has demonstrated that as a result of the World War the attitude of the peoples of Britain, France, Germany and Italy is such that when war is the probable alternative they will support the minor national concessions and sacrifices advocated in the interest of peace by courageous statesmen."

Traffic Hours On Key Bridge 4:15 p.m., 7 a.m.

Move Will Restore Traffic in Hours of 60% of Business

Georgetown business leaders last night hailed announcement by Maj. Brown, superintendent of police, that the Key Bridge would be kept open to all vehicular traffic from 4:15 p. m. to 7 a. m. beginning today.

John Paul Jones, general counsel for the Georgetown Business Men's Association, said opening the bridge to private passenger cars at 4:15 p. m. instead of 5:30 p. m. would restore the flow of traffic through the Georgetown business district during the hours when retail stores regularly transact about 60 per cent of their business.

Maj. Brown's announcement followed a meeting in his office of a committee named by the District Commissioners to study the conditions resulting from closing of the bridge. The committee, headed by Maj. Brown, included C. R. Whyte, District superintendent of bridges; L. P. Robertson, District street engineer; Capt. P. H. Tansey, assistant engineer commissioner; J. V. McNary, senior engineer of bridges of the United States Bureau of Roads; Inspector W. E. Holmes, and William A. VanDuzer, director of traffic.

McNary said after the committee meeting that the business slump in Georgetown was not entirely a temporary problem growing out of the bridge closing. He explained the recently finished section of the Memorial highway just above the Arlington Bridge had already permanently diverted a part of the regular traffic between the District and Virginia. With the construction of the Memorial highway to Great Falls as now planned, he said, the bulk of traffic along the Potomac would be diverted to the Virginia side.

Witnesses Needn't Reply, Utility Inquiry Is Stalemated

By the Associated Press.

The Associated Gas & Electric System threatened yesterday to force the Power Commission into the Federal courts for a test of its right to investigate the system's activities.

Defense counsel, in the opening session of the long-delayed inquiry, challenged the commission's jurisdiction and refused to permit company officials to testify.

Frank A. Hampton, commission examiner, ruled that the commission had jurisdiction but conceded that witnesses might properly accept advice of counsel not to testify. Unless a compromise could be worked out shortly, commission aides said, the commission might be forced into the courts for a decision on its authority to compel testimony.

The commission said one aim of its inquiry was to determine the nature and reasonableness of service costs charged against certain Pennsylvania operating companies of the Associated system.

Associated counsel contended that the "real purpose" of the inquiry was to obtain information for the Pennsylvania Public Utilities Commission so it might punish Associated "for alleged violations of State statutes."

The commission has subpenaed books and records and individuals connected with what it called the "Hopson Service Companies" as it alleged they existed between 1936 and January 1, 1939.

(H. C. Hopson, of Morristown, N. J., purported czar of a far-flung utilities empire, previously denied officially that 14 service companies named by the commission were under control of Associated Gas & Electric.)

500 Firms Face Fines for Tax Payment Delay

Penalty to Be 1% Of Compensation Levy On the Pay Rolls

Five hundred District firms will be fined for failure to pay the 3 per cent unemployment compensation tax for December, John A. Marshall, director of the District Unemployment Compensation Board, revealed yesterday on the deadline for payment of the pay roll levy. The fine will be 1 per cent of the tax payment.

Employers with eight or more workers, however, still have until the last day of this month to pay their December tax and still be eligible for a 90 per cent credit toward the Federal social security tax on pay rolls.

Unions Behind Setup

Marshall said that generally District employers were co-operating in the program, and rarely forced court action for collection of the tax. Labor unions, he said, are "absolutely" behind the setup, which pays benefits up to 16 weeks to unemployed District residents, averaging $9 per week.

Simplifications of methods in handling the tax is the aim of the District board, Marshall averred. He pointed out that much of the delay in paying the 3 per cent tax could be eliminated by allowing annual, semiannual, or quarterly payments instead of the present monthly plan.

Surplus Bothers Officials

One of the disturbing problems of the program, Marshall asserted, is the question of what to do with the tremendous surplus piling up in the United States Treasury to the credit of the Compensation Board. Covering the past two years a surplus of $10,366,000 was on hand December 31, 1938, with $1,675,000 paid out in benefits. Interest on the money is estimated at about $200,000 per year. Marshall foresaw a surplus of $60,000,000 in the next 25 years, unless the system is changed. Under the present setup the money is earmarked for benefit payments only.

A tax based on a "needs" basis, instead of the present arbitrary 3 per cent tax might be the solution, he said. Marshall also declared he would favor changing the month's minimum waiting period to a maximum period, in order to speed up payments to the jobless.

He Calls It The Tops

All lovers of springtime may justly complain that her harbingers loaf on the way; and, dodging the blizzards, the snow and the rain, en route dilatorily play. One harbinger only is faithful and true and to overcome mischief contrived. The robin and swallow may later pull through, but the Seed Catalogue has arrived!

The lilacs will presently brighten the place, and the crocuses liven our days, and the soft pussywillows with kittenish grace will hold out their paws for our praise. When a wee snowdrop smiles, as a wee snowdrop should, it assuredly dissipates gloom. But, darn it, these beauties are not yet in bud, and the Seed Catalogue is in bloom!

Ay, springtime is coming, her face all aglow, in a dress of the loveliest print; and every rake sings with a joyous yo-hoe, "Sing hey for the small bed of mint!" Yes, sirs! In the garden we'll shortly begin preparations for wonderful crops—of this, that and t'other. So let the world spin! For the Seed Catalogue is The Tops!

The Relief Controversy

The dispute over whether 600,000 relief workers or nearly twice that number might be affected by a cut of $150,000,000 in the WPA deficiency appropriation is distracting attention from the real issue. That is, how essential reductions in the present extravagant scale of relief spending can be achieved with a minimum amount of distress to persons dropped from work-relief rolls.

Opponents of any reduction in the scale of WPA spending are trying to stimulate opposition to retrenchment by assuming that wholesale dismissals would necessarily follow acceptance of the cut voted by the House. They also seem to take for granted that every WPA worker who is dropped will be left to starve along with his helpless dependents. Such arguments are calculated to give encouragement to those elements inside the WPA which have already come to regard relief work as a vested right.

If Congress heeds the cries of alarm certain to arise whenever any determined effort is made to curb relief spending, a ponderous, permanent Federal relief organization will undoubtedly be fastened upon the country. Given the will to economize, which the proposed cuts can do much to foster, the WPA can find numerous ways of reducing costs without precipitating any of the dire disasters predicted.

WPA rolls should be scanned for the purpose of selective elimination of the many whose eligibility is subject to challenge. Frilly artistic projects, entailing extremely high overhead costs in proportion to the number of relief jobs made available, should be discontinued. And, finally, care should be taken to see that no community is compelled to take over the task of providing for more dismissed relief workers than it can reasonably be expected to assist. In assuming, however, that all localities are unable to carry any additional relief burdens, President Roosevelt is on untenable ground. Furthermore, he is openly stiffening the resistance of local authorities to Federal economy moves that would entail new obligations on their part.

By gradual and selective reductions in WPA rolls during the next five months, and through internal economies, substantial savings could undoubtedly be made in rational and humane ways, even under the present inherently wasteful relief setup. Ultimately, of course, a complete reorganization of the methods of administering relief is essential. Only thus can Federal relief expenditures be brought within the limits of the Nation's taxable capacity without inflicting undue hardships upon those in need of assistance.

Security Act Changes

The recommendations of the Social Security Board for liberalization of old-age pension payments and extension of coverage to excluded groups are in line with earlier suggestions made by the Advisory Council on Social Security. While it is proposed to advance the date of paying benefits to 1940, and to provide certain supplementary benefits for dependents, the board stresses the intention of keeping the costs of the system within bounds. "When the system is fully matured," it says, "its eventual cost with the changes here recommended . . . would be somewhat less than the cost of the present system."

While the data upon which this conclusion rests have not been made public, methods whereby savings could be effected are outlined. A scaling down of benefits is contemplated for single persons and it is also proposed to achieve economies by changing the basis for calculating benefits.

Mindful, no doubt, of the strong pressure on Congress from the Townsendites, the report emphasizes the importance of visualizing the ultimate financial costs of the insurance system. As the President said in transmitting the board's recommendations to Congress, "we shall make the most lasting progress if we recognize that social security can furnish only a base upon which each one of our citizens may build his individual security through his own individual efforts."

Even so the Social Security Board concludes that no reductions should be contemplated in the scale of pay-roll taxes, which at maximum will reach 6 per cent—with 3 per cent contributed by employers and 3 per cent by employes. Unlike the Advisory Council, which recommended a restudy of the tax payments after total pay-roll taxes had reached 3 per cent, the board urges retention of the pay-roll taxes embodied in the present law. They would, the report states, probably cover the increased annual cost for the first 15 years of the liberalized provisions recommended by the board and might provide for a small contingent reserve in addition. But thereafter, as annual benefits paid began to exceed annual tax collections plus interest on reserve investments, it would be necessary either to increase the pay-roll taxes or to provide for the deficiency out of other taxes.

Of course all these computations are highly tentative. But the mere fact that the board envisages a system which will call for pay-roll taxes for old-age insurance alone of 6 per cent, plus general taxes, levied perhaps on incomes and inheritances, is enough to give one pause. It should, however, be pointed out that receipts from these general taxes would replace interest which, under the present system, would be derived from a larger reserve fund. Since the interest payments have to be met the difference is one rather of form than of substance.

While the board, unlike the Advisory Council, does not recommend abolition of the reserve system, its recommendations would in fact bring about a sharp reduction in the size of the reserve. Moreover, loss of interest from the invested reserve fund would necessitate Government contributions—an outcome viewed approvingly by the board. "The portion of the total costs (of the old-age insurance system) to be met by taxes other than pay-roll taxes," it says, "should depend upon the proportion of the general population covered by the insurance system. The wider the coverage, the more extensive this contribution from other tax sources might properly be."

In addition to plans for expanding the system, the board's report contains some very important recommendations designed to raise the standards of State administrative performance in the field of unemployment compensation and public assistance to the aged, the blind and dependent children. Particular emphasis is laid upon maintenance and strengthening of Federal-State relationships.

With that end in view it is suggested that the States be required as a condition of receiving Federal funds to establish a merit system and to prohibit political solicitation and political activity on the part of employes connected with unemployment compensation and public assistance agencies.

Most of the board's proposals for liberalization and extension of coverage seem to meet a real need. And in many cases the direct cost would be partially if not entirely offset by reductions in other forms of relief outlays. The major danger is the possibility that the costs of the liberalized system will exceed expectations. For that reason a careful study of the recommendations and supporting data should precede Congressional action.

Veil Of Secrecy

The expulsion from Mexico of Frank L. Kluckhohn, Mexico City correspondent of the New York Times, will intensify the mounting suspicion that all is far from well below the Rio Grande.

Governments which have nothing to hide have nothing to fear from the presence of able newspapermen. By her action in expelling Mr. Kluckhohn, Mexico shows that she does not belong in that category. Courageously carrying out his function as a newspaper correspondent, Mr. Kluckhohn discovered facts which have never been controverted. Their publication reveals Mexican policy in a rather two-faced light.

In particular, this reporter uncovered the arrangements made by the Mexican government with Germany whereby oil from expropriated and unpaid-for American and British properties is to be traded for German merchandise. Apparently Mexico would prefer to have developments showing increasingly close relations with the Third Reich kept secret since they tend to destroy the thesis built up by "liberal" propagandists to the effect that Mexico is strongly anti-fascist in her orientation.

The expulsion of Mr. Kluckhohn indicates that Mexico intends to tolerate within her borders only those correspondents who are willing to toe the mark and become active or tacit propagandists of the regime. In view of this country's considerable stake in the republic to our south, and the importance of keeping fully informed as to what is going on there, such a stand is unlikely to succeed. The more Mexico seeks to hide unpleasant facts regarding her situation the more important it will become to penetrate the veil of secrecy.

Reviving Dead Projects

In spite of repeated rebuffs from Congress on these subjects, President Roosevelt is trying once more to revive the Florida ship canal project and the Passamaquoddy power development program. The only new argument advanced for reconsideration in case of the canal is the assertion that it now would fulfill a national defense need. Whether that is sufficiently vital to justify continuing work on an undertaking that would necessitate very large expenditures over a long period of years is problematical. At any rate, Congress will presumably demand some very convincing evidence of the strategic advantage of this costly project before considering its revival.

One of the most disheartening aspects of this new spending drive is the fact that a Republican ally has sprung up in the person of Representative Brewster, of Maine, who is said to be preparing a bill to give effect to the President's request concerning the "Quoddy" project. The members of Congress from Florida who are supporting the canal project at least have the excuse of being Administration supporters. But Mr. Brewster's advocacy is patently due to consideration of the local benefits that would flow from pouring more millions into a tide-harnessing undertaking that even the President now appears to view chiefly as a means of providing jobs for Maine's unemployed.

It is this disposition on the part of Congressmen to set local interests above the national welfare that makes it dangerously easy to extend the scale of public spending with little regard for the effect upon Federal finances.

The long and apparently successful fight against the Florida ship canal and the Maine tide-harnessing project gave rise to hopes that in particularly flagrant instances of extravagant spending on public works national considerations would outweigh the pressure of local self-interest. Fortunately the hope persists, even though a Maine Republican has found the hope of a healthy handout too appealing for the fortitude of his political conscience.

Discontented Cows

From the Christian Science Monitor

An unpeaceful cow is a subject calculated to wring the heart. Let the modern farmer pause, pail in hand, ere he inflict upon the too sensitive auditory organ of Jersey or Holstein his habitual rendering of selections from "Lohengrin" or "Die Walkure."

It is all right for him to hum or sing or whistle Beethoven's "Pastoral Symphony" or practically any of the compositions of Mozart or Haydn, according to the findings of the Dairy Research Department of Reading University. Such music has a soothing effect, but the strains of Wagner, says Prof. Mackintosh, curdle the milk. In fact, a recent news item from the English institution of learning reports "Farmers are warned to keep their cows away from modern jazz music and Wagner."

Of course, one must not take too seriously everything one reads, or, in the case of the cattle, everything one hears. It might even be asked whether the Wagnerian selections used in the experimentation were produced as written or whether they were translated into the fashionable dance hall version of the great compositions. The grand opera music "swung" at us by the brasses of some orchestras is enough to curdle anything.

Present day research may yet receive proper acknowledgment, for fathoming with musical precision the causes of the return on certain days of a few dozen bottles of curdled milk and cream to the neighborhood store. It may some days go so far—who knows?—as to announce to a waiting world what particular musical composition it was that the Hey-diddle-diddle cat with the fiddle was guilty of playing when the cow jumped over the moon.

"Of marriage licenses issued each year in New York City, about 8,000 are never used."—Newspaper filler. There's many a falter 'twixt courthouse and altar.

"The year 1938 brought us no really great earthquakes."—Nature Magazine. From many other standpoints, 1938 was no great shakes.

From Honkong

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By the time this letter reaches you, it will be Christmas—the season for world rejoicing in freedom and good will. From across the seas we send you our heartfelt greetings. At this time, however, let us remember the countless thousands in betrayed Czecho-Slovakia, in trampled Austria, the thousands of Jews deprived of nationality or persecuted in their homeland. For them the spirit of Christmas will not be a reality. In our country we are fighting for those rights which democracy and freedom give and we are confident that America, which stands for these same ideas is our closest friend. Moreover, we feel that America and the democracies of the world should stand united and, through an awakened public opinion, firmly resolve to devise ways and means by which aggression and international lawlessness shall be curbed.

Do you realize that Japan is buying 54 per cent of her munitions from the United States of America. Her heavy industry depends upon a grade of steel and a type of machinery that can be bought only in America. Her military trucks, airplanes, oil and gasoline came largely from your country.

It is your purchase of Japan's chief export, silk, that enables her to buy these indispensable supplies from you. Ninety-seven per cent of your silk comes from Japan; 85 per cent of all the silk that she exports is sold in the United States of America.

America can help to stop aggression in China. A welded public opinion in America against Japan and her imperialistic policy can be a most effective instrument, and we are appealing to you to be a part of this force. This is how you can help: Write to your friends and organizations—we particularly wish that you would send letters to men in key Government positions—urging them to make unlawful the sale or shipment of arms and munitions and other war materials to aggressor nations. You will thus be actively contributing to the cause of peace, and will make this Christmas significant as a step toward the goal of true "peace on earth, good will toward men."

One Side Of The Law

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of Monday, January 16, entitled "Price of Flood Control," seems clearly to give the impression, if not categorically to state, that Vermont has a "right" not to permit the Federal Government to acquire land within the State without the State's consent.

As a matter of law, there can be no serious contention that Vermont, or any other State, has any such "right." Many judicial decisions establish the proposition that the Federal Government may acquire such lands as it needs for Governmental purposes within any State, without the consent of the State, as long as the Federal Government does not seek to acquire exclusive political jurisdiction over such land. It is only when exclusive jurisdiction, as contrasted with legal ownership of the land, is sought by the Federal Government, that the consent of the State is necessary.

As recently as 1937 the United States Supreme Court said, in James vs. Dravo Contracting Co., 302 U. S. 134, 147: "The right of eminent domain inheres in the Federal Government by virtue of its sovereignty and thus it may, regardless either of the owners or of the States, acquire the lands which it needs within their borders. Kohl vs. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 371, 372. In that event, as in cases of acquisition by purchase without consent of the State, jurisdiction is dependent upon cession by the State . . ."

For other decisions to the effect that consent of the State is not necessary for acquisition of land within its borders by the Federal Government, see Mason Co. vs. Tax Commission of Washington, 302 U. S. 186, 207; Cherokee Nation vs. Kansas Railroad Co., 135/U. S. 641, 656; Stockton vs. Baltimore & New York Railroad Co., 32 Federal 9; United States vs. Mayor of Hoboken, New Jersey, 29 Federal 2d 932. DONALD B. MacGUINEAS.

Baltimore Vs. Washington

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A most amusing reprint from The Washington Post appeared in the Baltimore Sun last night which gave us all a good laugh. In the first place, one of the best jokes in this article was the relationship in size of Baltimore to Milwaukee, Pittsburgh or Buffalo, cities with about half a million population or a little over, in comparison with Baltimore's 941,000 on our latest police count, which, due to local industrial conditions, is now estimated at 1,011,000, perhaps more.

Then the story of cobble streets or open sewers. The writer is 36 years of age and was born in Baltimore, but I'll be hanged if I can remember any such streets or sewers. The writer for The Post paper must be a great-granddaddy. It tickles us the way Washington, which is regarded by this metropolitan center of population and commerce as a large blank village which it would undoubtedly be were it not for the Government buildings erected by the various tax-paying States. To compare it with this great cosmopolitan world center, the second port in America, would be preposterous.

The Post writer has failed to mention that Baltimore is the largest aviation manufacturing center in the country, a city with more motor cars per person than any city of its size. It has more movie theaters than any city its size. It is the home of art, culture and an outstanding musical training center. It has a beautiful chain of magnificent boulevards and public parks equal to any in the whole world. The late Queen Marie of Rumania said Baltimore was the most delightfully European city in all America.

Therefore we pardon your ignorance. It is too bad that Washington has only one commercial smokestack to the thousands upon thousands which spell industry and great commerce in Baltimore. All in all your story sounded more like the notes of envy, just a little like something you could expect of a person who has become sophisticated because of the proximity of the President, but who is absolutely unfamiliar with a real business center. F. A. SNYDER.

Appointive Powers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Notwithstanding our Constitution, appointive powers, other than for personal aid and consultation, appear to me to belie the principles of true democratic government. As it now functions, democracy is simply a theory on which political demagogues capitalize to the detriment of the majority governed. Not until the populace become more enlightened can it be put into practice.

Cuban Sugar Quota

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In commenting on my recent letter regarding the sugar tariff, Dr. Jose T. Baron, Charge d'Affaires, whose letter appeared in The Post January 11, infers that the great discrepancy between the amount of money Cuba receives from selling its goods in the United States and the amount it spends back for the purchase of American goods is accounted for by "the many so-called invisible items that tend to effect a balance in the movement of funds."

In other words, Dr. Baron maintains that it was all right for Cuba to sell us $148,000,000 worth of goods in 1937 as a result of the Reciprocal Trade Agreement and to buy, in turn, only $92,000,000 worth of our goods because the balance of $56,000,000 which Cuba did not spend for American goods was used to pay for such invisibles as debt service, freight charges paid to American shipping lines, insurance premiums, dividends on American owned utilities, etc.

Careful checking of such charges for 1936 and 1937 indicates, however, that Cuba's payments for such services to the United States were considerably less in both years than the amount of Cuba's favorable trade balance with this country. In fact, available figures show that such payments on Cuba's part came to only about $7,000,000 in 1936 as compared with a favorable trade balance of $60,000,000 and amounted to only about $8,000,000 in 1937 as compared to a favorable trade balance of $56,000,000. In arriving at the amount of Cuba's invisible payments, I have deducted our invisible payments to Cuba in the form of tourist expenditures. Those invisibles exceed $12,000,000 a year.

I repeat that it is folly to subsidize the Cuban sugar industry at the expense of the Federal Treasury and the American taxpayer. Cuba already enjoys a sugar quota greater than that of all cane and beet sugar growers in continental United States and in excess of the combined quotas of Puerto Rico and Hawaii. During the last four years, Cuba has enjoyed a subsidy of $171,000,000 from our Treasury in the form of duty preferences. The proposal to give that foreign country a further annual subsidy of $6,000,000 on sugar is not justified by any facts which so far have been brought out.

U. S. Medical College?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The bill of Chairman May, of the House Military Affairs Committee, to appropriate $10,000,000 for a United States Medical College is of great interest to the District as well as to the Nation. Such a medical college will be on the highest level and its graduates will not only serve the armed forces and the Federal and State departments of health, but no doubt the general public in the outcome.

It is to be trusted that such a college will draw no color or race lines and that qualified students of minority groups in this land will be eligible and that without disqualifying technicalities.

Such a college may be a step against monopoly and class control of medicine just as much as the new independent hospital. It may lead to advanced work in other sciences. Washington should be developed into a great research center along every line of human effort. It should be the congregating center for scholars, scientists, physicians, lawyers and for students of all branches.

The facilities for research should be broadened. Research is bigger than colleges. Only Government wealth can endow science, scientists and students.

Doghouse

TOMPKINS seemed worried. His brow was knitted and he had an absent air to which we were unaccustomed. Finally, Major Nutt prodded him a bit and wound up by saying: "Well, out with it, Tompkins. Let us have what seems to oppress your mind."

"The thing that bothers me," said Tompkins, "is the changeableness, the instability of language. Now, there was a time when I thought I knew all that was practically worth knowing about English; but I am growing out of that and the shocks and bumps my self-love receives in the process are far from pleasant, I assure you.

"But the worst of it is that slang changes at an accelerated pace that leaves me breathless when I try to keep up with it; and you never know when the slang of yesterday will be received into good society and become almost classic the day after. I used to think I was up on all the current slang, but the present smart usage is way beyond me. I'm a back number, that's all.

"My attention has recently been drawn to the expression: 'Dog-house,' or 'Put him in the doghouse,' or some such nonsensical gibberish as that. After it has been used in your presence a few times you seem to get the connotation and there is a glimmering of light on its meaning, but it is a waste of time to attempt to look it up. But every time I hear anything like that I prick up my ears, cock my head on one side, and try to look like an intelligent pup that is trying to understand what you are saying to him.

"But all my efforts come to naught. It is just no use trying; and I'm beginning to think that my trouble is similar to that of the color-blind when you attempt to describe colors and shades to him. I am coming to think that I am it and that I'm so accustomed to living in the doghouse that there is no meaning for me in the term.

"But, if that is so, I'm going to have the doghouse reconditioned, redecorated, and refurnished and live there all by myself.

"Well, the other day was Friday the Thirteenth, and it snowed. Driving home some speed artist brushed my fenders, dented them and took the paint off. Boy, was I mad! Well, owing to some police regulations, I had to park the car a block and a half away from my house and when I got home my feet were wet and I left tracks wherever I stepped. Well, sir, we had a bridge party on for the night and the house was all doiled up in preparation for that and I just leave it to your own memories to set forth what Mrs. T. said to me then.

"I said nothing, for I was afraid to tell her about the slight damage to the car; and so I went busily to work to array myself in purple and fine linen for the evening; that getting me out of range. Well, sir, I'm cheerful idiot and am always glad to bring up changed subjects; so at dinner I described my meeting with old Johnnie Walker and the pleasant talk we had at lunch. 'But, Mary,' I said, 'I can't account for his faraway look when I asked about his elder son, Bob.' 'Why, Father!' my wife and daughter chimed, 'Don't you remember that Bob is in the Pen, out West somewhere?' Then they looked at each other as if to say, 'He's hopeless!'

"After a while the party got started and everything was running smoothly until someone doubled my five-diamond bid and my partner and I being vulnerable I redoubled. You should have seen the look my partner gave me! It upset me so that I made a mess of that hand, which was a good hand and should have won the five tricks, and our opponents scored largely against us. Then and there I began to really know what being in the doghouse means.

"They say every dog has his day. Well, I think Friday the Thirteenth when it snows is all mine. I'm not going to tell you about the break I made when I wandered over to another table where old Mrs. Billups was laying her husband out for trumping her ace. All I said, in my airiest manner, was: 'Peace, it's Wonderful!' But my persiflage didn't take very well and I left that table with my tail between my legs and crawled under the sofa.

"I'm in the doghouse, now;
I'm in the doghouse, now.
As son of old Cerebus
I'm unum e pluribus.
And my howl's a dejected 'bow-wow.'"

Baltimore Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos discussion of Baltimore in a recent article in The Post, you failed to mention that Baltimore is the city where you are taxed for property you do not own and the real owner is exempted. When you purchase a home in Baltimore and are unable to purchase the lot upon which it stands, you must pay a 6 per cent yearly ground rent to the lot owner and also pay a yearly tax for him of $2.65 on each $100, and then add another State real estate tax of $.2335 per $100, all for property you do not own. That is the old burg of Baltimore. And the very amusing thing is the average home owner is not aware he is paying a tax on the ground. That's Baltimore.

Obvious Fraud

THE MOST OFFENSIVE and obvious fraud on earth is the pretense by the Communists, on the one hand, and the Nazi-Fascists, on the other, that they are at war on any other issue than a greedy rivalry for power. In methods and in their scorn of principle and honest dealing the dictatorships of Berlin and Rome are exactly like their nominal enemies of Moscow, and it can be shown out of their own conduct that they employ every foul and treacherous trick that they complain of in the operations of the Communists and attribute to the Jew.

The Communists, for example, receive their political direction from Moscow and, though they may hold citizenship in the United States and swear to uphold the Constitution, are relentless enemies of the American form of government and the freedom and peace of the people. The Nazis and Fascists, who condemn and pretend to hate this deceit, nevertheless follow the same course in this and other foreign lands.

THE NAZI LAWS permit and encourage tested Nazis in foreign countries to become citizens, but require them to remain German nevertheless and to extend themselves in the interests of Nazism to the injury of their adopted lands. This cannot be done without descent to the very same mental reservation and perjury which Nazi agents in this country profess to loathe in the Communists and vice versa, and the anti-American bunds are identical with the Communist groups in their hatred of the United States and their purpose to shatter the country by internal hatreds.

If Communists worm their way into normally American groups and by disciplined effort under foreign direction convert some Americans to their beliefs and manipulate the unsuspecting remainder, imposing on their honest hatred of Nazi-Fascism, the same method is used by the Nazis and Fascists. For every detached and outwardly innocent group of Americans who think they are serving some decent cause in an organization nominally devoted to Americanism and democracy, but are actually being used by Moscow, there is at least one similar group serving Hitler or Mussolini in the same way.

THE SAMENESS is evident again in the loud and angry enthusiasm of the Communists and their "fellow-travelers" for proposals made in Washington which have the aim of instituting here Government controls which they pretend to detest in Berlin and Rome but indorse in Moscow. The Nazi-Fascist groups also have their "fellow-travelers" who disguise themselves as constitutional Americans and, like the Communists, look to a day when they may rise to power and change the Constitution to suit their ends. And, like the Communists, they also have their innocent and deluded adherents of conscientious Americans who have been attracted to anti-American organizations professing to desire to save the country from communism by resort to Nazi-Fascism.

In their dealings with this and other countries Germany and Italy have been guilty of the same thefts that they profess to resent in Moscow and which they describe as the cunning and contemptible inventions of the Communist. For it makes little difference whether foreign property be confiscated outright by revolution or first detained and gradually stolen by the invention of new laws. To the victim there is only a question of whether he prefers to be robbed with a blackjack or a gun, and to the slight credit of the Communists, if any distinction can be drawn, it must be allowed that they went straight to the point and said, "This is a stickup."

SO FAR AS the effect on this country is concerned, they leave no preference. Even when Communists do invade labor organizations and the WPA their constant effort is to widen their influence, disrupt and destroy, which, after all, is the purpose of the Nazis and Fascists in our midst.

In the matter of persecution abroad no Communist anywhere has any right to complain of anything that Hitler or Mussolini has done, and the Nazis and Fascists, having used the same brutal ways, are equally at a loss.

But in our own midst it is always true that no Communist or Fascist on any "fellow-traveler" of either side ever has any kind intention, and anyone who finds himself unwilling to oppose both sides with equal fervor must be suspected of approving the evils common to both.

The Conspiracy Of Silence

By Barnet Nover

Censorship And Foreign Affairs

AT NO TIME has there been a greater need for accurate information as to what is going on abroad. At no time has this fact more clearly been recognized by the press and public alike. But never has it been more difficult to get complete and uncensored foreign news than at the present time.

The difficulties are certainly not mechanical. The day is long past when Americans had to await the arrival of steam packets to learn what had happened in Europe weeks before. Communications between the United States and almost any other part of the world is now practically instantaneous.

The real difficulty with respect to international newsgathering and news transmission today is not technological but political. The fact is that there are many nations in the world which are fearful that the truth concerning them will get out and, therefore, do all in their power to suppress it.

IT HAS BEEN well said that truth is the first casualty of war. The world today is in a state of war, though this war is waged less by military than by other means. And it is more than a coincidence that the nations which are most deeply imbued by the war psychology are the ones which are most actively engaged in censoring and suppressing news which tends to throw an unpleasant light on developments taking place within their borders.

It is a very revealing fact that almost the first move made by a dictator is to curb the freedom of the press. That happened in Russia, in Italy, in Germany and is happening in other lands touched to a greater or lesser degree by anti-democratic ideologies. In those countries the press has ceased to function except as the mouthpiece of the regime.

But internal censorship is not enough. Sooner or later that censorship must be extended to cover the foreign press as well, at least in the reporting of developments within the dictatorship.

WHY? One reason, but a very minor one, is that through foreign newspapers the people in a dictatorship may find out what is going on within their own borders, and perhaps find out, too, how their country and its regime are regarded by foreign contemporaries. The fact that European dictatorships, Communist and Fascist alike, find it necessary, from time to time, to bar the entry of certain newspapers and periodicals published abroad, shows that this possibility is not being lost sight of by the powers-that-be.

However, a more important reason for the attempt to extend domestic censorship to news sent abroad is that such news may destroy myths which the dictators are very anxious to propagate in other lands as well as at home.

In the intense struggle between nations which is now going on imponderable factors outweigh ponderables. That was very clearly revealed in the world-shaking developments that had their climax at Munich.

WHY DID NOT Messrs. Chamberlain and Daladier call Hitler's bluff on the Czech-Slovak issue? Many reasons have been advanced, some valid, some far-fetched. One of the valid reasons, certainly, was that the British and French premiers believed in the hypothesis that Germany was strong, united behind the Fuehrer and prepared to go to war at a signal from him.

Now, as it happens, no one knows, and possibly no one is in a position to know, whether that hypothesis was correct or not. But there can be no doubt whatever that it was precisely such an idea that the Hitler regime has for five years sedulously sought to propagate, both at home and abroad. There can be no doubt that Hitler succeeded. But insofar as this idea actually may have run counter to facts, the failure of the world to find out the truth about the situation in the Third Reich had needlessly disastrous consequences.

A similar situation exists with respect to Italy, where censorship of the press and pressure on foreign correspondents have been carried on for an even longer period. Every time a correspondent reported facts and developments distasteful to the fascist authorities the sword of expulsion has been held over the correspondent's head. Not infrequently this sword has been allowed to drop. Mr. Paul Cremona, of the Christian Science Monitor and Mr. Frank Smothers, of the Chicago Daily News, are only the latest to feel the lash of fascist disapproval.

Now it takes a very strong-minded individual to operate successfully with that kind of a sword hanging over his head. For all of those permitted to remain there is the temptation to conform as far as possible to the wishes of the dictatorship or, at least, not to go too far out of one's way in antagonizing the regime. This does not mean that all news coming out of Italy or Germany or Russia is propaganda. In the specific meaning of that invidious term very little actually is. But the propagandist aims of those countries are none the less fostered by the difficulty of getting out of those nations news which, however valuable to an understanding of what is going on within their borders, is unpalatable to the particular dictatorship.

WE HAVE an example of censorship by intimidation from a point nearer home. The other day the Mexican government gave Mr. Frank L. Kluckhohn 24 hours to get out of Mexico. According to the Mexican press bureau, he had made "alarming predictions about the supposed course of national policies." Precisely what this means is not clear. Mr. Kluckhohn believes, however, that his crime is knowing too much about Mexico's current dealings with Germany.

These dealings may, in themselves, be innocent or they may be sinister. Other nations beside Mexico have trade relations with the Third Reich and some of them, like Soviet Russia and the United States, are anything but sympathetic to the ideology of the Berlin regime. The fact that Mexico is eager to cloak such transactions in a veil of secrecy suggests, however, that there is something devious about them, that the publication of the facts might destroy the picture which Mexico wants the world to believe is the true one of what she is and what she is after.

In this respect Mexico is clearly acting in a manner only too reminiscent of countries whose ideologies she officially scorns.

Federal Investing

By Mark Sullivan

Roosevelt's Refuge

AS SOME MAY KNOW, I sometimes write history. In that role, I have often found it difficult to trace the roots of events. The event is there, the document is there. But what preceded the document? How did it come about? What was the "why" of it?

Recalling my occasional bafflement, it occurs to me to make things easier for future historians when they come to write of a landmark incident that has just taken place, though it is not as clearly recognized now as it will be.

The landmark is a new phrase—a phrase in the address Mr. Roosevelt made to Congress January 4. The phrase is "Government investing." I am confident that expression never appeared in any Presidential message before. It is new, and it is a landmark, and it is a forecast.

We can be quite sure that if Mr. Roosevelt had written his message any time in the past he would have said, not "Government investing," but "Government spending." He would have used "Government spending" for precisely the same thing that he now calls "Government investing." When he was running for the Presidency in 1932, he did use the term, "Government expenditures" and its equivalents, such as "Government borrowing" and "Government deficits." He used those phrases to condemn the thing the phrases stood for. For these practices, he condemned the Administration of President Hoover, almost with bitterness.

MR. ROOSEVELT promised to stop the Government deficits, to halt the increase in the national debt. As soon as he was in office he started earnestly to do so. Thereafter, from time to time, Mr. Roosevelt alternately receded from economy, alternately returned to it. Throughout, he held earnestly to the objective of ending the deficits. Year after year he expressed the hope that the deficits would be ended the next year. But each and every year the deficits continued.

Finally, Mr. Roosevelt now approaches the end of his two terms. He sees that he will never balance the budget. He sees that the debt will continue to increase, and by the end of his eight years will be more than twice what it was when he began. It does not matter whether Mr. Roosevelt did not try hard enough or continuously enough, or whether conditions were too much for him. Whatever the cause, it would be an awkward situation for any of us.

So, in the self-justification which all of us seek under difficulty, Mr. Roosevelt finds a refuge. He takes a part of what was formerly called "Government spending" and calls it "Government investing." The thing which he calls "Government investing" is the same thing that until now was called "Government spending." That which was bad when called "spending" becomes good when called "investing."

AS A DEVICE, this is not new. Talleyrand was aware of it. He said, "A chief art of politics is to invent new names for things which, under their old names, have become unpopular." Apparently the present example of this maxim was presented to Mr. Roosevelt by one of the New Deal minor prophets, Mr. David Cushman Coyle. I quote from a magazine article Mr. Coyle wrote about a year ago:

"When the Government makes an investment, everyone calls it spending." Mr. Coyle frankly admits, "I am one of those who have called it spending." But this, Mr. Coyle now discovers, is wrong. So Mr. Coyle adopts the old device. The maxim of Talleyrand, as expressed in the language of Coyle, is set down in complete candor. I quote Mr. Coyle: "The fact is still there, but the name was wrong; it is time to adopt a more accurate vocabulary." By adopting "a more accurate vocabulary"—that is, by changing the word "spending" to the word "investing," we arrive at a happy outcome. Again I quote Mr. Coyle: "Once the people understand this distinction, they can be shown that the Federal finances are in a sound condition."

THAT PHRASE, "the people can be shown," stirs a vague memory—something from Lincoln, something about what you can do to some of the people some of the time. But it is not fair to suggest this. Without doubt, Mr. Coyle is completely sincere. And it is a fact that some of what we have always called "Government spending" has been of the nature of "investing."

However, an adaptation from Shakespeare's line about the rose seems to fit, "a national debt by any other name will weigh as heavy." There is a French saying about history that is completely pat, "the more it changes, the more it is the same." There is another phrase, of less classic origin, "No matter how thin you slice it, it's still boloney."

Anyhow, most persons will continue to believe that loose fiscal policy continues to be what Mr. Roosevelt said it was in 1932, "a veritable cancer on the body politic and economic." If that was true when the national debt was 20 billions, it must be twice as true when the debt is 40 billions.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Guam As A Diplomatic Instrument

ALTHOUGH GUAM is a small island, it is a focal point of American relations with Japan. The question of establishing a fortified airplane and submarine base at Guam, which is what the Hepburn Naval Board recommends, is one which needs most emphatically to be examined with the coolest kind of judgment. Until that has been done, the Japanese press would do well not to create an uproar and members of the American Congress would do well not to jump hastily into commitments either for or against.

For, we must remember, as the President pointed out at his press conference on Tuesday, that the recommendation of the Hepburn board has not yet been adopted by the Administration. As a matter of fact, the board was called into being, not by the President, but by Congress; it was appointed by the Secretary of the Navy because in the Navy bill enacted last May he was directed to appoint it. And it is dubious, moreover, whether a board of this kind ought to have raised a problem that (to use its own words when it refrained from discussing the defense of the Philippines) "involves matters of national policy which take precedence over the military problem involved."

FOR GUAM is unfortified today because the United States agreed 17 years ago in one of the Washington treaties not to fortify it. And though Japan has abrogated these treaties, the State Department still regards them as binding. That being the case, we ought not to make a unilateral decision, and ought not to discuss Guam without discussing our whole political relationship with Japan.

That relationship has changed radically since the treaties of 17 years ago. At that time we agreed in effect to disarm completely west of a line that runs north and south from Alaska through Hawaii; Japan promised in return to respect the territorial integrity of China. Japan has broken that promise. We have kept our part of the bargain. Moreover, though we have made verbal protests against the conquest of China, we have, in violation of the intent of the neutrality act, furnished Japan with materials of war that have been essential to her in conquering China. Japan cannot say that our acts have not been patient, forbearing, and wholly unprovocative.

THE UNITED STATES has done this because the American people have in fact decided to let the Asiatic peoples settle their affairs in Asia. But Japan has indicated that as an expanding empire she does not limit her ambitions to the Asiatic continent. They are pointed southward through the Pacific Ocean toward the Philippines and the Dutch East Indies; the evidence for it is that in violation of treaty obligations Japan has set up naval bases in the mandated islands which lie between Honolulu and the Philippines, and on the line between the East Indies and the United States. This extension of the Japanese naval power has not only made the Philippines defensible only at an intolerable cost but has made probable her command of the maritime highways over which the United States receives rubber and other necessary materials.

Now it is one thing for the United States to consent to the conquest of China; it is a wholly different thing for the United States to consent to the creation of a great maritime empire, so formidable and so aggressive. The American people would like to withdraw from the Philippines; they would like the Filipinos to have independence. But they would not like the Philippines to be conquered and turned into a vassal of Japan, and they would not care to have to build a navy adequate to defend the American position in Hawaii against the kind of navy Japan could create if she controlled the resources of the East Indies, dominated Australia, had pushed Great Britain and France out of the Pacific Ocean, and had a stranglehold on the supply of rubber.

For what the Japanese army does in Asia does not concern us vitally. But what the Japanese navy does, and what it may become, must be a matter of great concern at all times.

NOW THE ESTABLISHMENT of an air and submarine base at Guam would presumably act as a check upon the expansion of the Japanese naval power in the Pacific. That would be its purpose. It would make it difficult for Japan to strike south toward the Philippines and the Dutch East Indies, or east toward Hawaii.

In deciding whether to establish such a base we cannot, however, in the circumstances be guided by the advice of the admirals. The question is primarily political, and the best approach, it seems to me, would be through negotiations with Japan. Congress should authorize the fortification of Guam, and then the State Department should invite the Japanese to discuss the question under Article XIX of the Washington Treaty.

IN THIS DISCUSSION we could say to the Japanese that if they do not wish Guam to be fortified they might return to the treaty by dismantling their illegal fortifications in the mandated islands. Then their fears and our fears would be simultaneously allayed. And this might lead to a discussion designed to arrive at an agreement as to the scope and the limits of the Japanese expansion.

This discussion could then become more realistic than it has thus far been in the exchange of diplomatic notes. For while we would probably be prepared to offer no tangible opposition to Japan's policy in Asia, it would also become clear that we are by no means bound to furnish Japan with the motor trucks, airplane parts, scrap iron, gasoline and machine tools which she needs in order to violate treaties that she refuses to discuss with us.

For our object is to negotiate an agreement with Japan, not to fight Japan in Asia and not to run away from Japan in the Pacific. And such a negotiation may possibly be induced by authorizing the fortification of Guam and by considering the application of the neutrality act.

THIS WOULD APPEAR to be the most prudent policy we can pursue. It would not be prudent, it would be an act of obvious defiance, to fortify Guam without offering to discuss the question with Japan. It would not be prudent, on the other hand, to show any signs that we are afraid to discuss Guam because the Japanese fire-eaters are excited about it. To fortify without an offer to negotiate would be provocative on our part; to refuse to fortify because of Japanese threats would put a premium on further provocation by Japan.

Our true policy in dealing with Japan, and for that matter with her partners in Europe, is to be moderate in our aims, circumspect in our language and firm in our attitude. And we can be firm only if our diplomacy possesses, besides fountain pens and typewriters, the legal authority to build strategic bases and to regulate the flow of strategic materials of war.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Ten Years Ago And Now

1. Everybody seemed to be taking a fling in the stock market on margin; today nobody can dig up the margin.

2. Even the office boy had a fortune on paper; today he hasn't any paper.

3. Golf clubs were getting $3,000 stock subscriptions, $1,000 initiation fees and $500 a year dues for membership and looking you up socially; today they let you in for $10 down and $1 a week and don't even ask your right name.

4. It was quite common for people to ask, "Shall we use the big car?;" now anything with gas in it will do.

5. Stock exchange seats were bringing around $600,000; today they're harder to sell than real estate.

6. All brokers' offices were jammed with customers who thought everything was going to 300; today a broker would be in solitude except for the two customers who still sit around munching peanuts and hoping the one they bought at 299 doesn't go below 3¾.

7. Thousands of women were in the stock market; today bingo is good enough.

8. A dictator was generally regarded as somebody who had a secretary to take his letters; today it's most anybody with radio connections, a wild look and a new idea for a salute.

9. If a man had money it was his own private affair; today it's a matter of public record, personal humiliation, non-stop investigations and a feeling of guilt.

10. The "How I Succeeded" magazine story had wide popular appeal; today nobody dares admit he ever got to work early, spent more than six hours a day at the office and occasionally did some night work.

11. Desk mottoes like "Do It Now," "Push!" and "Over the Top" could be placed on any executive's desk safely; today they label you as a Tory, a Republican and the sort of person who would work hard to get ahead in life.

12. You could go down to any banker and borrow $100,000 on any crazy proposition; now any banker thinks you're crazy if you want to borrow $1,000 on any proposition.

13. Lindbergh, Charlie Chaplin, Jimmy Walker, Cal Coolidge, Tom Mix and Babe Ruth were holding public attention instead of Adolf Hitler, Gen. Goering, Benito Mussolini, the Musica brothers and Emperor Hirohito.

14. The banks paid 4 per cent on savings accounts and 2 per cent on checking accounts; today we hate to dwell on the subject.

15. You could tune in on any radio any time and get the Happiness Boys, Vincent Lopez, Amos 'n' Andy and Tony Wons; today it's 50 to 1 you get a purge speech, a Nazi denunciation of America or a demand for Tunisia.

program if such controversial features as the single civil service administrator and the proposed new Welfare Department are removed. Byrd also has asked the "equivalent" of the Wheeler amendment, which required Congress must take affirmative action on each of the President's merger orders, before they become law.

Three Vacancies

There were three vacancies on the House Reorganization Committee when its life expired—Representative Mead, of New York, elected to the Senate; Representative Vinson, of Kentucky, appointed to the Court of Appeals for the District, and Representative Knimn, of Ohio, defeated. Other members of the old group who may be reappointed by the Speaker include Cochran, Warren, Beam, of Illinois, and Robinson, of Utah (Democrats), and Taber, of New York, and Gifford, of Massachusetts (Republicans).

The Rules Committee is expected to meet next week to consider the Cochran resolution. Representative Cox, of Georgia, ranking Democrat on the rules group, reserved his views on the reorganization program but predicted the Cochran committee will be set up again to "examine the subject." But Representative Fish, of New York, new Republican Rules member, called the old program "an abomination" and said Cochran will be questioned "on what the committee proposes to do this time."

Ramspeck Gives Views

Ramspeck told reporters he saw no reason for setting up a special committee when the regular House Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments already has authority to proceed.

The Georgia chairman of the House Civil Service Committee said his group will be called into session promptly to act on his bill to provide civil service coverage, after noncompetitive examination, for some 230,000 Federal employes not now under the classified service. He said the President's general order blanketing in non-civil service employes as of February 1, will cover only about 50,000 persons, after allowance is made for agencies barred from civil service by statute, and for some 33,000 WPA administrative staff employes blocked from civil service by the House deficiency bill.

'Gateway to Hollywood' Is Still Open to Capital

RKO-Radio Talent Quest Nears Deadline; Hersholt Among President's Birthday Visitors; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

"THE Gateway to Hollywood" still is open to young aspirants for film fame.

Several weeks ago this column discussed at some length the RKO-Radio undertaking to discover new faces and new blood for the cinema. This enterprise was to take the form of a national talent quest—and very definitely has done so—with regional competitions, auditions and the like, interzone finals and an ultimate contract for the young man and woman decided upon by the judges as the most likely candidates for screen eminence. Today, I believe, is the "deadline" for applications to be filed in the office of Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's Theater.

BELL

This is a bona fide opportunity for two unknown young people to become Alice Eden and John Archer, featured characters in a film play that already has been written and awaits only the conclusion of the search for talent to go into production. To be sure that Washington is given due consideration as a possible source of unique acting ability—Helen Hayes, Billie Burke, the late William Pruett and numerous others of the native-born who have gone on to illustrious careers in the theater, evidently are in the backs of the minds of Jesse K. Lasky and the others at the bottom of this competitive business—the sponsors have sent a distinguished representative to the National Capital to see that all goes well. The Eastern manager of this elaborate project, which entails radio as well as camera tests, is Bryant Washburn, one of the film notables of his day. Mr. Washburn, aided and abetted by "Polly" Palmer, former Washington newspaperman, was in town Tuesday and will be again, from time to time, in the interests of keeping open the "Gateway to Hollywood."

Honest Opportunity Is Presented

Mr. Washburn was guest of honor at a late soiree in the Mayflower Hotel Tuesday night, with Hardie Meakin, of Keith's, as host. He made clear the fact that this is no "fake" contest, but an eager and honest effort on the part of RKO-Radio to discover two youngsters who may be so endowed as to insure an opulent and popular future before the cameras. The real tests of the applicants will come through a series of broadcasts in which the public will serve as judges by eliminating those whom it feels will not do. As the number simmers down, certain finalists, as yet, of course, undetermined, will emerge as those who will eventually be put to the acid test.

Out of it all inevitably will come the two young people who will be placed under long-term contract, with an ascending scale of salaries and, it is hoped, an increasing measure of public favor. It is all very interesting and very authentic, as the Messrs. Washburn and Palmer tell it, and seems to afford the opportunity for which so many screen aspirants have waited.

But the point is that it is necessary to hurry to get in the running.

This Bryant Washburn is by way of being a bit of a miracle. Ponce De Leon should have consulted him about that fountain of eternal youth thing. Mr. Washburn hasn't aged a minute in the last 25 years. Ask anyone who has seen him. Handsome as any of the prevalent "matinee idols," erect, alert, clear-eyed and almost untouched by the hand of time about the temples, Bryan Washburn could step out on any screen and cause feminine hearts to flutter. They were fluttering all over the place in the Mayflower on Tuesday night.

Washburn, after three years of stage trouping, took to the screen as far back as 1911. He went to the old Essenay Company out in Chicago—the name being the outgrowth of the initials of the company owners, Spoor and Anderson, "S" and "A"—for a six-month engagement and remained there for seven years. Perhaps the most popular and best remembered of the films he made under the Essanay trademark was "Skinner's Dress Suit." That picture attracted the attention of Jesse L. Lasky and Mr. Washburn was taken over by Paramount for a long period of screen supremacy in the field of light comedy. And now here he is back again under the Lasky banner, running down youngsters who may become as famous and as popular as he was. Such things run in circles is what I always say.

Hersholt Joins Ranks of Visiting Stars

Next to add his name to the list of screen notables who will be present to add luster to the coterie of stars lending their presence to the President's Birthday Celebrations of Monday night, January 30, is Jean Hersholt, one of the film's most distinguished character actors.

Mr. Hersholt's most familiar characterization in recent months has been that of the kindly country doctor in all of the films featuring Canada's famed Dionne Quintuplets. The character, of course, is based on the career of Dr. Dafoe, who brought the five fabulous infants into the world and has guarded their physical welfare ever since. It is reported that the Quins actually believe, when they are working with him, that Mr. Hersholt really is Dr. Dafoe. This, however, is only the most recent of the Hersholt claims to eminence. He has been on the screen for a round quarter-century.

Born in Denmark, Jean Hersholt started his American career in a Western thriller based on life in early California. In these old Westerns, Mr. Hersholt encountered the usual Hollywood experience of being an Indian and shooting cowboys in the morning and being a cowboy and shooting Indians in the afternoon—all in the interest of economy. Hobart Bosworth, Dustin Farnum and a great many of the other film veterans underwent a similarly bizarre and valuable experience in learning the fundamentals of picture-making in a day when productional bankrolls were not what they are today.

It was with Hersholt that Don Ameche made his debut before the cameras, in an item which, if memory serves, was called "Sins of the Fathers." The title was intriguing because the picture revealed no instance in which the father had sinned. His sons, perhaps, didn't do so well. There was a little contumely on their side. Ameche, nevertheless, managed to disclose much of the ability and a vast amount of the versatility for which he since has become famous.

Mr. Hersholt's name on the list of visiting stars adds another reason to the mounting number why Washingtonians should be especially interested in the series of seven President's Birthday Balls scheduled for the night of January 30, when all of the guest stars will be introduced to those in attendance at all seven hotels.

We Receive an Autographed Book

There has come to hand a book I am extremely glad to have received and hope sometime to have an opportunity to read. It is "Charles Laughton and I," by Elsa Lanchester, who in private life is Mrs. Charles Laughton, and is published by Harcourt, Brace & Co., of New York. It is a little flattering to have it graciously inscribed to this writer on the flyleaf by the author. Such fragments of it as I have been able to glance at during a hectic week of Presidential Birthday preparations reveal an unsuspected and pungent wit on the part of both Miss Lanchester and her husband, who has written a foreward that bristles with personal humor. The book traces the careers of the two involved in the title throughout the length of their joint film association and evidently makes public for the first time many of the amsuing sidelights of their European and American activities before the cameras and microphones. As I say, I shall be interested in reading the book some time. That, of necessity, will have to be after January 30, 1939.

Under the direction of Eileen Fowler, the Players Club of the Central Community Center tonight will present an evening of one-act plays in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School, Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest. The plays to be presented are "The Gooseberry Mandarin," by G. D. Ruthenberg; "Mennonite," by William S. Banks, and "The Mad Hatters," by John McMurray.

The casts will include such well-known resident amateur actors as Cecelia Carney, Hugh Smythe, James Carroll, Mildred Hope, Erma Lee Kerte, Malio DeAngelis, Nick Vitals, William Sheaffer, Helen Hebert Peck, Marian Leigh, Ethel McKenn, Joe Jessleyn and Jack Rollins.

One-Legged Parrot At Least Can Talk

For years Buddy Ebsen's wife has wanted a talking parrot, so Buddy agreed to get her one for Christmas. But after he got it home from the pet shop he discovered that it had only one leg.

Indignantly he returned it.

"It talks fine," said the comedian, "but it has only one leg."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 18.—Look out for fireworks. Joe I. Breen, who for many years has headed, in fact, has almost entirely run the Hays office, and in an elegant way, if I do say so—is about to undertake (so a little birdie tells me) the head of production at a major valley studio, which will come as a great surprise to the man who today is holding that position, and whose contract has over a year to run.

HEDDA HOPPER

Warner Brothers could afford to present the Navy with another new fighting plane for the assistance they gave the studio in "Wings Over the Navy." The flying scenes are gorgeous and will do a lot to renew patriotism and pride in Americanism. The story wasn't much above the routine type but John Payne's performance was. And oh, how breeding tells. Olivia de Havilland grows lovelier, and Frank McHugh gave more than the part called for.

I heard many women say they liked it better than "Dawn Patrol." But next time they invite the Navy and their ladies to a preview, they should make certain they've reserved enough seats for their guests. I've always understood guests were supposed to come before family.

John Ford has given "Stage Coach" the Academy flavor he put into "The Informer," with Tommy Mitchell getting the best part of his life. Gee whiz, that Ford's dynamite. And funny thing about Mitchell, after his swell work in "Hurricane," Sam Goldwyn allowed him to languish for seven months without a part. Then he was called for one day's work in "Trade Winds." After he'd finished that, he was given "Stage Coach." Yes, if we can find the reverse way of doing things, we always use it.

If Joan Blondell signs a term contract with Universal, where she's doing "East Side of Heaven" with Bing Crosby, that studio can thank her maid and cook. They've been reading scripts like mad to find out if they're good enough for their missus. If they say "ok" Joan signs. Smart, yes?

A London letter tells us that Jack Buchanan is presenting himself in a play by Jack Buchanan, produced by Jack Buchanan. In a 24-page program there are 12 pictures of him. And every box of chocolates sold in the theater there is a picture of him. Say, wasn't there a man who fell in love with his own reflection in a pool and drowned himself?

Also from London I was happy to hear that John McCormick jammed Albert Hall for his farewell performance, with almost as many people outside who couldn't get in. While in Hollywood we wouldn't let him sing or give him a job.

Actor Bob Allen threw a party for a couple of Dartmouth grads. But ran into a snag when he said good night to his 3-year-old daughter, who wanted to stay up and have fun, too. Pleaded papa: "Now, now, dear. Don't you know what the night was made for?"

Little Catherine, who's been listening to the radio, lisped right back: "Uh-huh. For love, daddy." What! Another Baby Snooks!

Perc Westmore, who's getting raves for his make-up on "Juarez," would much rather be known as the man who set the rod and reel record for catching the largest marlin off Catalina this year. Oh, yes?

After spending two weeks at Yucca Loma, Rouben Mamoulian is getting right down to business and "Golden Boy." Dick Cromwell seems to be heading the list of candidates for the lead with Noah Beery, jr., running him a close second. But I'm told that little Johnnie Downs, the dancer, read the part better than anybody.

Pearl had testified before the grand jury and revealed that he met Chaperau in 1935—introduced him to George Burns in Monte Carlo—and never spoke to him after the end of that year . . . "I didn't suspect Chaperau, gentlemen," Pearl assured the grand jurors. "When I meet a man, I take him at face value. I don't question his background. For instance, gentlemen, suppose I had been a guest on F. Donald Coster's yacht. So should I have asked him: 'Who owns this yacht and what's your background?'" . . . Two days after Pearl's testimony F. Donald Coster was exposed—as Musical

WHEN JACK BENNY arrived in New York recently for his final examination before the grand jury he brought with him all the jewelry involved in the smuggling indictment against him . . . Benny flung the jewelry on the table in front of the jurors . . . "Take it, take it," he stated. "I never want to see these damn things again."

DIFFICULTY with the New York Theater Authority is delaying the final arrangements for the President's Birthday Ball, to be held here within two weeks. The Theater Authority, insisting upon a 15 per cent cut of the gross receipts, can't get Gen. Hugh Johnson's signature to an agreement . . . Ed Wynn, who sailed secretly from this country ten days ago, will return on Friday . . . Life magazine, preparing a profile of Louella Parsons, is unable to find a Hollywood writer willing to do it . . . Col. Gimp Snyder has notified his Broadway pals that he has compiled a list of those who refused him aid. He promises to remember.

MAYOR LAGUARDIA still hasn't been reconciled with the American Labor Party, which helped elect him—but whose gubernatorial candidate. Gov. Lehman, LaGuardia failed to indorse . . . At the American Labor Party Club in the Hotel Algonquin the membership cards include this listing: "Name: LaGuardia, Fiorello . . . Address: City Hall (Temporary)."

ALL THE FRONT PAGES, as well as the columnists, have been reporting various versions of the Ernest Hemingway-Eddie Chapman set-to at the Stork Club. The reports are so conflicting that it's about time the true details are recorded . . . And these are the facts, so help me—because I was there when it happened, sitting next to Hemingway, on his right. Chapman was seated on Hemingway's left, and had imbibed a few . . . Hemingway turned to talk to me when Chapman pawed at his face . . . "I don't like that," said Ernest. He half-rose from his seat and grazed Chapman's jaw with a harmless short right . . . The lawyer fell off the chair, was helped to his feet, and both men shook hands.

FIVE MINUTES LATER, Chapman fell off the chair again, without being hit. He arose, muttered something about having $3,000 on his person, and told Hemingway: "Feel my muscle. You're not so tough. Let's fight" . . . "For $3,000, I'd fight anybody," Hemingway replied. "I'll fight you for $50. We're two good guys, and good guys shouldn't fight. But if you want to fight, let's go into the men's room, or call me at my hotel tomorrow" . . . Hemingway took off his glasses and delivered them to me for safekeeping . . . Both men then sat down and Chapman staggered away.

SHERMAN BILLINGSLEY, proprietor of the Stork Club, insists that Chapman can lick Hemingway and is willing to bet $10,000 on the outcome . . . My money—but certainly not that much—is on Hemingway.

A FEW MONTHS ago the Saturday Evening Post purchased J. P. McEvoy's article about Darryl Zanuck . . . Zanuck's publicist, Harry Brandt, is anxious to see that story in print and has been wondering about the delay . . . He therefore asked Nunnally Johnson, the Twentieth Century-Fox scenarist and magazine writer, to ascertain why the delay . . . Johnson wrote to his friend, Wesley Stout, editor of the Saturday Evening Post . . . "I hear you've been coquetting with Henry Luce's magazine, Life," Stout replied. "I'll publish that article—which has been crowded out by spot stories—about your boss, Zanuck, if you'll write a fiction story for us" . . . And so Johnson is writing the story.

Studios Use More Extras For Pictures

During the past 60 days Paramount studio has used a total of 7,460 extras—a record for any similar period since 1936, Fred Schuessler, casting director, announced recently.

Starting with "Cafe Society," the comedy starring Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray, on October 15, the studio has been filming a series of pictures with dress extras and large numbers of atmosphere players of all types.

For "Hotel Imperial," which co-stars Isa Miranda and Ray Milland, the casting office hired 300-odd soldiers and peasants in Austrian and Russian scenes. Most of these worked for 30 days under the direction of Robert Florey.

Still filming with more than 100 extras is "Midnight," the Claudette Colbert-Don Ameche co-starring comedy. This has an aristocratic French background requiring dress types. A street sequence required 280 extras.

Race tracks and a party sequence in "The Lady's From Kentucky." George Raft's starring picture, require more than 500 players over a two-week period.

Fashionable London drawing room scenes in "I'm From Missouri," Bob Burns' new starring comedy, brought 140 atmosphere players to the studio for four days.

Cecil B. De Mille's "Union Pacific," which traces the building of the first transcontinental railroad, is filming 700 Irish types, gamblers, and Western background players.

Belasco

"Grand Illusion" yesterday began the second week of its third engagement at the Belasco Theater this season. Directed by Jean Renoir, it tells of three French prisoners in a German camp during the World War. The underlying thesis of the film is a strong plea for peace and a whacking denunciation of war. Very little remains to be said about it except that, although it is largely in French, the action and subtitles forcefully express the theme. "Men of Ships" is also being held over on a bill at the Lafayette Square filmhouse.

Ragtime Drummer

In "Sweepstakes Millionaire," Charlie Ruggles portrays a chain cigar store manager who's never been able to forget that he played hot traps with Rudgate College's Ragtime Rascals in 1919. He uses a sweepstakes prize to reorganize the jazzers, with amusing results.

Hay Comedy Heads Bills for The New Week

'Bachelor Born' Comes To National Monday; Other New Programs

After a solid year's run in New York, "Bachelor Born" will open at the National Theater Monday night, for a week's engagement. Under the title of "Housemaster," Ian Hay's humorous comedy on English public school life ran for nearly two years in London's West End. Mr. Hay, once a schoolmaster himself, in one of those schools which the English call public and we in America call private, has based his play on an incident that occurred while he was teaching. The central character, calling to mind James Hilton's Mr. Chips, has been a housemaster for thirty years and when a new headmaster comes to the school a fundamental difference of opinion arises. Edward Fielding, Marcella Swanson, Francis Compton, Jane Sterling, Richard Temple and Stephen Ker-Appleby have the leading roles. There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

"Kentucky," in which Technicolor brings fresh justice to the Blue Grass State, opens this morning at the Palace Theater. Loretta Young and Richard Greene play the descendants of a pair of families which have been feuding since Civil War days. Needless to remark, Kentucky's crowning glory, the Derby, marks the climax of the film, a Derby which will be run, not in a downpour of rain, but in the brightest glow of the new color photography. Walter Brennan has another principal role as a hard-bitten old horse breeder and Karen Morley, Douglas Dumbrille and Moroni Olsen are also prominent in the cast. A travelogue on Sidney, Australia; "Passing Parade," a special Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer short and news pictorials complete the bill.

Claudette Colbert comes to the Earle Theater screen tomorrow morning in the title role of "ZaZa." Based on the famous play of the early 1900's, this new screen version of the Music Hall favorite's infatuation for a man of the upper classes, was prepared for the screen by Zoe Akins, whose "The Old Maid" received a recent Pulitzer Prize. Herbert Marshall appears opposite the star and the cast, which George Cukor directed, includes Bert Lahr, Helen Westley, Constance Collier, Genevieve Tobin, Walter Catlett and Rex O'Malley. On the stage the Earle will present "Paris Music Hall," in which the 16 Earle Roxyettes will dance the can-can and Charles Kemper, late of "You Never Know," will be the featured performer with his partner, George Haggerty. Other acts will be Harris and Howell, with Zerita and Leon Cephas; the Kim Loo Sisters and Andre Bordeaux, master of ceremonies.

Robert Taylor and Wallace Beery are a duo of hot-headed, two-fisted pioneers in "Stand Up and Fight" which will be the screen attraction at the Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow morning. Cumberland, Md., of the 1850's is the setting for this tale of the iron horse and slave-running. Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Charles Bickford, Barton MacLane and a large company support the two male stars under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke 2d. On the Capitol stage the 24 Chester Hale Capitol Comets are making their farewell appearance in a trio of new routines. The eight men of Manhattan, Broadway singing octet; Ray and Geraldine Hudson, juvenile acrobatic dancers; Stuart and Martin, a pair of zanies, and Johnny Barnes, nimble-legged entertainer are in the cast of the stage production, "Bubblin' Over."

"The Great Man Votes," in which John Barrymore stars, will open on Saturday at RKO-Keith's Theater. Barrymore plays a former scholar who has gone to seed from imbibing too freely and is working as a night watchman. His motherless children take him in hand when it evolves that his is the only vote in the precinct, a precinct on which the entire city election will turn. Peter Holden, who made such a success n New York last season in "On Borrowed Time," and 11-year-old Virginia Weidler, recently seen as the young miss who gave Mickey Rooney so troublesome a time in "Out West with the Hardys" support the star along with Donald MacBride, Katherine Alexander, Luis Alberni and Granville Bates. Arthur Reilly, Washington newscaster, will appear on the stage, giving a resume of events in his 10 years of broadcasting. "The March of Time's" latest issue, "The State of the Nation—1939" and Walt Disney's "Merbabies" complete the bill.

After a successful week at the Earle Theater "Paris Honeymoon," the Bing Crosby starring vehicle, will open a return engagement at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow. It is a gay and frothy farce with music, featuring Franciska Gaal, Shirley Ross, Akim Tamiroff, Edward Everett Horton and Ben Blue. Bing plays a wealthy American cowboy living in a European castle, traditionally the home of the "Queen of the Roses." Then his fiancee appears.

The fifth and most successful of the Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy vehicles returns to F street tomorrow when "Sweethearts" opens at the Columbia Theater. The popular singing stars appear as a husband and wife, who are co-starring in the Victor Herbert musical, and their boredom after six years in the same parts forms the basis of the plot in which Frank Morgan, Florence Rice, Ray Bolger, Mischa Auer, Herman Bing and Reginald Gardiner also figure. Technicolor and fine singing are the film's most important features.

Deanna Durbin and Leopold Stokowski return in the popular "100 Men and a Girl," which will be the week's attraction at the Little Theater commencing Sunday. One of the most highly regarded efforts of the youthful star, the film boasts, besides the singing of Miss Durbin, the playing by a 110-piece symphony, under Stokowski, selections from Wagner, Tschaikowski and "Men of Steel" tells in Technicolor boxing and "Kangaroo Kid" is the cast.

"Grand Illusion," the French anti-war film will continue at the Belasco Theater where it is in its third engagement. Winner of the National Board of Reviews prize as the finest film of the year, the film, written and directed by Jean Renoir, features Erich von Stroheim, Pierre Fresney and Jean Gabin.

The Trans-Lux will present four short subjects in addition to its regular strong fare of newsreels. "Men of tSeel" tells in Technicolor of the making of steel; "Journey to Normandie" features a trip through the beautiful French province; "Count of 10" is an action film of boxing and "aKngaroo Kid" is the color cartoon at the Fourteenth Street news house, beginning tomorrow.

"Stripe Me Pink" is the burlesque production which will play the Gayety Theater the week beginning Sunday afternoon. Georgia Sothern, dancer, and Sam Raynor, comedian, are the chief performers in a cast which also includes Happy Hyatt, heavyweight, striptease clown; Three Lunatix, knockabout funsters; Marie Cord and Gladys McCormack, two charmers, and Charles Harris, a character actor.

Soothing Moments for the Stars

FILM ACTING IS NOT ALL TRIBULATION

Left, Fred MacMurray and the beautiful Madeleine Carroll experience a romantic moment in Paramount's forthcoming production of "Cafe Society," in which The Post's columnist, Lucius Beebe, also is a principal. Right, Bob Hope undergoes the tender ministrations of Martha Raye in "Never Say Die," a film version of the famous old stage comedy in which the senior William Collier once played

James Curtis, 34, yesterday was convicted for the second time of the $100 holdup of a Florida avenue drug store in September, 1937. His first conviction was reversed for technical flaws.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. —Adv.

It must have tang—Senate Ale has the old-time lusty, musty tang.

It must have mellowness—Senate Ale has a flavor as mellow as the tone of an old bell!

It must have "substance"—Senate Ale has body but it gives "a body" appreciation for the other foods at the table.

It must hold its life in the glass—part of the flavor is in the carbonation. Small bubble carbonation keeps flavor in and flatness out of your glass of Senate Ale.

Superpower Broadcast Ban Is Approved

FCC Group Favors Retention for Present Gives Policy Views

A special committee of the Federal Communications Commission yesterday brought in a report recommending retention for the time being of the ban on "super power" broadcasting stations, proposing a 13-point program policy and offering numerous other suggestions on broadcasting standards.

Findings of the three-man committee, headed by Commissioner Norman S. Case, were based upon hearings conducted here last June, in connection with the proposed adoption of new rules and standards of engineering practice.

Issuance of the first part of the committee's report—the second part will contain final recommendations and be submitted "at any early date"—coincided with the appearance before another FCC investigating group yesterday of William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Outlines Columbia's Policies

He outlined to the committee on chain broadcasting and monopoly, of which FCC Chairman McNinch is chairman, Columbia's policies on services to and relations with affiliated stations. In reply to a question by George B. Porter, assistant general counsel of the commission, Paley disclased that it is possible some of the 1,213,000 shares of C. B. S. stock being kept in reserve, unsold, may go on the market to help finance the company's television enterprises.

Frank White, treasurer of the broadcasting company, testified in detail on the stock setup last week. Other C. B. S. officials are scheduled to be heard by the committee later.

The Case committee, whose other members are Commissioner T. A. M. Craven and George Henry Payne, did not state arbitrarily that super power stations—over 50 kolowatts—should be barred, but recommended that "the commission proceed on a more intensive accumulation of facts and a consequent study of the economic factors involved."

Last year the same committee urged that the permit of Station WLW in Cincinnati to broadcast experimentally on 500 kilowatts not be be renewed. Its regular power is 50 watts, the present limit for Class One stations.

Committee's Program

Admitting that "it is very difficult to prescribe standards of public service" which would be uniform for all broadcasters, the committee did, however, state that adherence to the following program practices is desirable:

1. Liberal reaction to public opinion and demands.
2. Fairness in making broadcasting facilities available to citizens and organizations of the community regardless of race, creed or social or economic status.
3. Assistance in the development and use of "home talent."
4. Encouraging the employment and training of community residents for service in the stations' various departments.
5. Presentation of well-balanced programs.
6. Avoidance of program matter which is obscene, libelous, seditious and contrary to keeping the peace.

Avoid Lottery Data

7. Avoidance of lottery information, misleading advertising and dull continuities.
8. Co-operation with the U. S. Food and Drug Administration, Postoffice Department, Federal Trade Commission, local medical authorities in connection with advertising of medical services or products.
9. Nondiscrimination in the acceptance of legitimate advertising.
10. Presentation of both sides, if controversial subjects are put on the air.
11. Avoidance of editorial utterances reflecting solely theopinion of the licensee but, if they are permitted, allowing those of opposite views to have their say.
12. Broadcasting of no program unfit for youthful ears.
13. Keeping abreast, technically.

Press Factor Considered

The committee suggested that in future hearings on applications for new stations, particularly in smaller communities, the commission might look into the factor of radio competition with established newspapers in the area.

"The committee does not mean to infer that such competition is not desirable," said the report, "but that if such competition should be destructive and should affect employmentof a relatively large number of people in a community, as well as the investment in property therein, there may bei nvolved an element of public interest which, at least, should be considered by the commission."

It was recommended that the terms of licenses for radio stations be extended to at least one year. At present they must be renewed every six months, though the communications act provides a maximum of three-year terms.

Home Beauty Treatment Art Test Ordered

Commission Fails to Lift Ban on Operators Working Outside Parlors

The District Commissioners reversed themselves yesterday and ordered a test case of the section of the cosmetology act prohibiting home treatment by operators, instead of amending the act to permit the home treatments, which they previously ordered.

The immediate implication was that home treatments would be prohibited for at least a year pending the outcome of the case in the courts.

Better Than Amending

The question of the constitutionality of the section can be treated by a test case, rather than amending the act, according to Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal.

"It would be foolish to change the law before testing its constitutionality," Seal said.

Meanwhile, it was announced the Board of Cosmeaology would meet today at 2:30 p. m. with Seal to draw plans for a test case.

Pave Way for Appeal

Seal said they would take a violator into Police Court and, in case the court held the section unconstitutional, would ask the court to quash the information so the District could appeal the case. On the other hand, if the court orders a conviction, the violator would ask for an appeal.

Agitation for a change in the law began several months ago, and finally a petition bearing the signatures of more than 200 prominent Washington women, including Mrs. Louis Brandeis, wife of the Supreme Court justice, was presented to the Commissioners.

District Approves Plan For WPA School Matrons Board

Steele, of the Works Progress Administration.

The matrons to be selected are "supposedly well-educated women who are out of work and face going on relief unless they obtain these positions," Dr. Ballou said.

"In large school systems comparable to that of the District, matrons are provided in the elementary schools to assist principals in caring for children at luncheon hours, play periods or when they are ill," Dr. Ballou explained.

He said services of the matrons would be "indispensible" in Washington's elementary schools, pointing out that the schools' appropriation from Congress only provides for employment of matrons in junior and senior high schools.

Financing Doubtful

Mrs. Steele last night said the matrons' project had received favorable attention of WPA officials, because it would be strictly a "labor" project, reducing necessity for purchase of materials. However, she said she knew no way to finance the arrangement at present. Mrs. Wells, new assistant principal of Roosevelt High, was indorsed for the position because of her "professional preparation, personality, good judgment, energy and ability," board members said.

A graduate of eGorge Washington University, Mrs. Wells received her A. B. degree there in 1920 and her M. A. degree in education there in February, 1938.

Mrs. Wells attended the University of Puerto Rico, 1821-23. From 1914 to 1917 she tought in Kansas and later taught in Puerto Rican schools. She has recently held a history teachership at Central High School, where she began full-time teacheing in the District school system in 1931.

Recommendations were unanimously adopted that the Metropolitan Police Department, all Parent-Teacher Associations, citizens associations and all city-wide organizations be informed of extent of the "vandalism" in efforts to curb destrucution.

"This problem is not only financial, but it has important implications in citizenship training. . . ." Dr. Ballou said.

Unlawful entries into District school buildings have reached a new high, Dr. Ballou reported.

"It has reached a point where I think it necessary to hire a watchman here at the Franklin Building to stay on duty all day to see who comes in and goes out of the various offices," Dr. Ballou said.

He pointed out that an overcoate belonging to Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent, "got up and walked out of Dr. Holmes' office" January 13 and that a traveling bag with traveling materials was taken from Dr. Thomas W. Gosling's automobile in the rear of the Franklin Administration Building.

Articles missing included six valuable typewriters, three adding machines and everything from feather pillows and extension ladders to eggs, butter and cheese.

The resolution did not take formal action on the propriety of granting applications for gasoline station licenses was presented by Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, chairman of the committee on building, grounds and equipment.

If the Board of Education is notified by zoning officials of a hearing on application for license in school vicinities, the superintendent will confer wth supervisory officers of schools regarding possible effect on safety of children and then will appear at the zoning hearing to present his findings.

Gallup Tried 6 Years Before Launching Poll

Discarded 50 Methods Used in Experiments, Writer Reveals

How George Horace Gallup, who "straight-on looks not unlike Dizzy Dean," manages to read the mind of America for The Washington Post and 63 other newspapers now stands revealed as nothing more than the exercise of plain common sense.

Dr. Gallup's own description of his polling methods, as given by Williston Rich in the issue of the Saturday Evening Post out yesterday, is far less satisfying than one of Gallup's own Institute of Public Opinion polls.

"It varies," explains Gallup.

These uncanny polls, one of which shocked the late venerable Literary Digest out of existence, developed gradually as the natural result of a passion for checking up on what people liked and why. But they did not spring full-panoplied from beneath the receding fringe of Gallup hair.

"Convinced that editors not only didn't know their readers' preferences but didn't know how to determine them," reports Rich, "he spent six years and discarded 50 trial methods before he found one that satisfied him." And this method, Rich points out, is that nationally known today as "The Gallup Method."

He was already prognosticating things as they actutally did happen when he first began marketing his political forecasts to newspapers in 1935. Despite consistently provable results for industry, his venture into the previously unpredictable field of politics and human emotions was not received with unmixed enthusiasm by newspaper publishers.

Rich does, however, record the reception in Washington of Dr. Gallup's first political prediction.

"'Eugene Meyer, of The Washington Post,' he reports, 'hired a blimp to cruise over the city on the day of the institute's first release, trailing a baner with its theme phrase, 'America Speaks!'

Real Secret of Accuracy

The polls, Rich explains, are based on the opinions of and interviews with people in every walk of life, of every political complexion, of every economic status, all selected proportionately as they represent such segments of the State, county and city in which they live. To results thus garnered are added, or from them are subtracted, numerous imponderables.

These imponderable, these abstractions, Rich indicates, are the real secret of Gallup's accuracy. By counting them in or out of his voters' opinions, he consistently smites the nail on the head.

For instance, there is the affair of the 1936 Presidential poll, on which Gallup bet his career on Roosevelt and won, and the Literary Digest picked Landon and, within a few months, ceased publication. In compiling 1936 national election poll, Gallup took into consideration the have-nots would line up solidly behind the New Deal.

"'The Digest,' says Rich, "'made its fatal mistake . . . in not recognizing that the have-not vote even existed. He was able to call its shot by making a separate survey of telephone subscribers and automobile owners—the class which would mail back most of the Digest's ballots."

Thus Gallup not only predicted the Digest would be wrong, but even called what its findings would be. He was just about right.

Publication of a biography of George Gibbs, almost forgotten American artist, advenurer and explorer, who accompanied a military expedition into the Columbia river country in 1849, was announced yesterday by the Smithsonian Institution.

Gibbs, a lawyer with a yearning for adventure, made collections of tehnological material for the Smithsonian. His journals give intimate details of the Columbia diver tribes and some of the peoples of northern California.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Public School Teachers of English Accused of Balking Student Initiative by Caustic Criticism

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you please publish this letter? I want to get a chip off my shoulder. The average English teacher in our public high schools today gained her knowledge of life from textbooks. She knows little of the education one gets from the school of hard knocks. She feels that she, and she alone, knows it all. "Here," she says to a student who has turned in a composition he spent three weeks in writing. "Here!" holding up the offending composition and reading it aloud to 20 or 30 snickering students. "Don't write like this. Whoever he ard of a shoe that looked pretty when covered with many spider webs? And here you jumped a precipice, and here again, you repeated the idea. Don't write like this. Can't you write better than this?"

Thus she goes through the paper—slashing, ridiculing, destroying all incentive, all desire to express a thought. The poor student becomes so self-conscious that he will not put, "The cat walked," down on paper for fear he might be ridiculed for the idea, the choice of words or the grammatical construction. A young person looks up to a teacher and feels that her opinion is final, deserving of greatest respect. If she fails to see any merit or originality in his composition, he becomes discouraged and gives up hope of becoming a writer.

Yet some of our greatest leaders began their lives as plain, every day sort of persons. And they would have remained inarticulate and unknown had not someone—a mother, a teacher, or a friend—encouraged and inspired them to go on and try. Is it, therefore, asking too much of a teacher to forget for a few minutes all the Greek and all the philosophy she has acquired; to forget for a moment all great books she she has read and all the great thoughts she has explored, and concentrate on earnest iniative, all student?

It is true, of course, that the world is crowded with would-be writers. Money is wasted on them. Time is wasted. Many reams of paper are wasted by young men and young women who are convinced that the spark of literary genius flickers fitfully in their minds, and who believe that practice and more practice will fan it into a glorious flame. It is true, moreover, that in all too many cases the only flame they will ever see will be that in which they one day burn their accumulated rejection slips.

Nevertheless, the best teacher chooses to suggest rather than to dogmatize. He inspires his students rather than discourages them. When he unbends to be amusing, it is not at the expense of the sensitive feelings of the student-author of some badly written paper. The real teacher is able to detect the spark of genius, when it exists; but he is also able to refrain from ridiculing the aspirant who lacks the spark. He leads his students joyously along the path of learning and they follow eagerly.

No student becomes discouraged when he is taught by a teacher who is willing to concede that genius sometimes lurks too deeply within the person to be readily seen or summoned. No student is ever discouraged by the teacher who knows that no one is born "great." The best teacher knows that anyone who is not a moron can learn, eventually, by constant practice, to write. I am hoping that these remarks may come to the attention of know-it-all teachers, who will find in it a reminder to be less caustic in their criticism. My own little granddaughter will no longer write a word, because the teacher ridiculed her poems. And yet, some day, I believe, she will "write."

ANONYMOUS.

Speaking of Mechanics

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: With regard to the social problem posed by "Mechanic" in his letter published January 12, I should say that—in a country where poor immigrant boys have risen to the status of millionaires and public benefactors and where log-cabin dwellers have become Presidents of this great land—a man is lacking in courage and intelligence if he permits himself to feel long cast down by his girl's deprecatory attitude toward his occupation, especially when she continues to "date" him and, more particularly, when so many young men, either because of poorly paid jobs or lack of employment, are unable even to consider marriage.

If this young man already has a high schol education, he should use it as a stepping stone to further study; that is, if he really desires and expects to choose "a wife from an excellent family, and one who is interested in cultural things." Why? Because the young woman of today more often considers a man's intellectual and cultural equipment than his special type of occupation, when weighing him as a matrimonial prospect.

Men of humble origin who made good in the past did not rest on their laurels at any time, but continued, by home study and constructive reading, to improve their minds and, incidentally, their occupational proficiency. Perhaps this young man offends his girl in small ways that he does not suspect, perhaps by boasting of his job or by failing to understand her ways of thinking, feeling and behaving.

Perhaps he neglects to observe the little niceties of existence, such as absolute cleanliness (somewhat difficult for one following his particular line of work, I grant), or by a want of gentle courtesy and consideration (which must be genuine to be convincing), or in other ways falls short of standards to which the "white-collar worker" (of lesser income) casually measures up. All women appreciate and respond to fine nuances of behavior and enjoy living up to the better things of life. It is in the very air of America and, after all, "the mind's the standard of the man." M. G. B.

Beauty Tools Need Cleansing

Hollywood, Calif.—Keeping the instruments of beauty scrupulously clean is one of the important secrets of loveliness, according to Perc Westmore, director of make-up at Warner Bros.

After a comb or brush has been used he suggests a minute of swishing it through a bowl of warm water containing a little ammonia or borax. Powder puffs should be washed every few days in sudsy warm water, half-dried by being pressed in a Turkish towel, fluffed up and set in the sun for a few minutes. Lipstick brushes should be wiped off with cleansing tissue before and after using.

Your Figure

Slim Midriffs Require Daily Workouts

Stomach Muscles Must Be Strong to Act as Girdle

By Ida Jean Kain.

YOUR FIGURE is only as streamlined as its weakest muscles. Without special exercise, these are all too likely to be the four pairs of abdominals, the very muscles which should be the strongest if they are to act as a girdle for the midriff.

These muscles run up and down, across, and on the bias. They are perfectly capable of holding the figure to streamlines until you are 90 . . . but what happens? They get so little exercise that they lose tone, become flabby, and gradually take on fat. The addition of fat further increases the tendency of this area to protrude.

To have a beautiful figure and to hold the internal organs in their proper position, these muscles must be kept strong. And there you have two good reasons for exercise! As weight is reduced, it becomes even more important that you exercise to strengthen the abdominal muscles. Otherwise, the organs which have been held in place by the cushion of excess fat will tend to sag further.

Exercise Every Day

But since you hate to exercise, you can cut these special exercises to three a day. That's the least you can do! Do this set every day if you want to be slim in the middle.

POSITION: Lying on the back on the floor, feet propped up on a chair seat, arms stretched straight down on the floor at the sides.

MOVEMENT: Draw up and in with the lower abdominal muscles, at the same time raising the hips off the floor. As you lift the hips off the floor, swing the arms straight back overhead until they are resting on the floor. Try to bring the body into a straight line from chest to toes, hold for a second, release, and lower. When the hips are lowering to the floor, the arms should be brought back down at the sides. Repeat the exercise 10 times. It is very helpful in counteracting the sagging tendency of the internal organs and should be done slowly and carefully.

Remain in the same position, with your back on the floor, feet propped up on a chair seat, for the two other exercises.

Strengthens Abdominal Muscles

In the second exercise, the movement consists in bending the right knee, placing the sole of the foot on the left thigh, and pulling foot and knee toward the chest. Return to the starting position and perform the exercise with the left knee bent, sole of the foot on the right thigh. Continue the exercise, alternating legs. This exercise strengthens the abdominal muscles, and it also slims the hips.

In the third exercise, the position is changed slightly. Begin with the hands clasped back of the head. The movement is to raise the right leg straight up in the air until it is at right angles to the trunk, swing it across the body and touch the toes to the floor far over on the left side. Return to the starting position and repeat with the left leg.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 18.

THERE IS something inexpressibly fascinating to us of the West about an Oriental woman. Her daintiness and the appealing architecture of her face never fail to interest us. At the moment the most sought-after woman in New York is Mme. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador to France, now busy in our town digging up dollas for the relief of her country's civilian war victims.

Madame Koo is exhibiting a fabulous collection of rare jade pieces here, with the proceeds going to her worthy charity. Over 300 people paid $5 apiece to see a preview of this treasure, but need I add that the press came in on the cuff? I peered at jade pieces said to be 3,000 years old, some of the most costly dating far back beyond the Christian era, but I was far more interested in the charming little Chinese hostess herself. Madame Koo is called one of the most brilliant women in China, which is easy to believe, for wherever she appears she is immediately surrounded by practically all the attractive and intelligent men in the room. In addition to her wit, she retains the good looks which have long made her a central figure at any social gathering on any continent. So dainty is her figure and so youthful is her face that it is practically impossible to believe that she is the mother of two grown sons, one a student at Harvard.

Little Mme. Koo teaches us all over again how much we have to learn from our sisters of the Orient. Beside her grave charm and her placid beauty, most of New York's women seem a little crude and more than a little shrill.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—More crazy things happen here than anywhere in the world, and it is not only that the place is so big. Maybe you heard about insane howling in the sky which terrified a section of Brooklyn the other night. Scientists of all types laughed it off, and to this moment no one knows what caused the ghostly wailing which set hundreds of people to calling the cop stations in the midle of the night. As a firm believer in the mass dafiness of our city, I prefer to think that these citizens, gripped by our common madness, were just hearing things. Anyhow, no one has come up with a better explanation than that.

—"Kiss the Boys Goodbye," the Clare Booth comedy hit peopled entirely by human rats, has just passed its 125th Broadway showing, which means that Helen Claire, the Alabama belle, and Benay Venuta are both collecting nice bankrolls this season. Incidentally, both these girls have other jobs, too. Helen announces newsreel fashions, and big blond Benay has a popular radio show once a week. Nice going, kids.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

A Sick Man

"Now I don't want to make any trouble, Honey, you just go on about your work . . . No, no, I'll be all right. It's just a nasty cold and all I need is a little rest—say, before you go maybe you better set a glass of water here where I can reach it. Oh yes, and the cough drops . . . and the atomizer . . . and my glasses . . . and now put those magazines on the chair. Now everything's all right—no, I better have some more paper tissues . . . and where's the salve? Oh yes. Well, now I'm all fixed. You just go on and forget all about me.

"Oh Honey! . . . Are you busy? . . . Say, I just wonder if you could fix me some orange juice. I've got an awful taste in my mouth. Say, what time is it? I better take another aspirin . . . What? . . . Well, I feel pretty rotten . . . Yes, I just ache all over. Say, did you ever ache in the top of your head? . . . Well, did you ever have your legs feel as if they were going to drop off? . . . Now maybe you'd better get me a fresh glass of water—I believe I must have a little fever . . . No, take the magazines away. I'm too sick to read . . . No, I don't want another thing . . . No, you just go on now. All I want is to lie still and rest.

"Say, Honey! . . . I wonder if you'd do something for me? . . . Well, take this salve and rub my chest again, will you? You know it feels sort of tight across my lungs. Do you suppose this cold could be going down? Say, where does it hurt when you have pleurisy? . . . On which side? . . . Well, maybe you better rub some of that salve on my back, too. Now don't tire yourself . . . What? . . . Well, I just don't feel so good . . . Say, did you ever have it feel sore as a boil along that tube between your throat and your eardrums? . . . Do you think it could be going into my tonsils? . . . That's all right now; you can go—no, maybe you better get me the electric pad and a towel. I don't want my lungs to get congested. And say—while you're up you might bring me a fresh glass of water. Oh yes, Honey, and see if you can find last night's paper—and the scissors. There's a piece I want to save.

"Where are you, Honey? . . . Come here a minute, will you? . . . Say, do you think I've got any fever? . . . Is my face flushed . . . Does it feel hot? . . . No, I don't feel so good. Say, did you ever have your eyes burn? . . . And your throat feel raw? Maybe I better gargle some soda water again. And say, I believe I'll take some more orange juice . . . Now then I want you to sit down and quit waiting on me. I'm all fixed now. I won't need another thing.

"Oh, Honey! I want to ask you something. Which side is the appendix on? . . . Well, no, I can't say that I've got any definite pain in any certain place but I was just wondering . . . Say, did you ever have it feel as if something were drawing across your stomach? . . . No, I didn't want anything, but while you're up maybe you'd better bring me another orange juice.

"Where are you, Honey? . . . What are you doing now? . . . Oh nothing. I just wondered where you were . . . Say, what time is it? . . . Only 11! . . . Oh no, I didn't want anything in particular—say, what is that old saying, 'Feed a cold and starve a fever?' . . . What? . . . "Starve a cold?" No, it's not that way. I know it's 'Feed a cold.' I'm sure of that. You see, when you have a cold you've got to build up your strength. Well, anyway, I was just thinking about lunch? . . . Were you planning anything in particular?"

Capital Society:

Frankfurters to Attend Roosevelt Fete Tonight

New Justice and Wife Will Be Center Of Attraction at White House Dinner for Supreme Court; She Shuns Spotlight

By Hope Ridings Miller

The Post Society Editor.

ALTHOUGH SHE dislikes the spotlight, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter will have plenty of it tonight when she and her husband, newest member of the Supreme Court, make their appearance tonight at the dinner to be given by President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Justice and Mrs. Frankfurter left their home in Cambridge last evening for the Capital, arranging their trip so that they could attend the annual state dinner in honor of the Supreme Court. Today, Mrs. Frankfurter doubtless will be besieged by reporters; but unless she breaks a rule she has followed for a number of years, she will decline to be interviewed.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Like many other official hostesses, she probably will prefer to remain in the background, giving her husband the center of the stage. But if she is wise—and I'm sure she is—she will learn soon enough that the best way to stay out of the Capital's limelight is not to shun it too obviously, nor too consistently. She will find there are other wives in the Supreme Court circle who generally manage to escape the spotlight of publicity but who are not too upset when it plays upon them full force. Realizing that the wife of a man in public office profits little by being too retiring, many a top-flight official hostess has quietly succumbed to requests for interviews and photographs, and come through with flying colors and none the worse for wear.

One of Mrs. Frankfurter's Cambridge friends described her to me as a "brilliant woman—serious and retiring, with a real flair for leadership and organization, but with few activities outside her home."

The former Marion Denman, of Longmeadow, Mass., she is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Mark A. Denman, who now make their home in Claremont, Calif. Almost 20 years ago she and her husband exchanged marriage vows before the Late Justice Cardozo, whose place Justice Frankfurter has been appointed to fill.

Prefers Not To Be Interviewed

When asked for an interview shortly before she left Cambridge, Mrs. Frankfurter refused, insisting that she be permitted to remain in the background. "I feel very strongly about this," she said to an Associated Press reporter. "You will have to indulge me."

Quite naturally, she is proud of her husband's achievements and his most recent appointment, and according to reports from Cambridge, she is looking forward to her life in Washington, where she is already well known.

Some time ago, after a visit here she averred, "We found a new spirit of Democracy there. The Roosevelts have changed things a great deal, and there is less meaningless ceremony."

Before leaving Cambridge last evening, she said she felt no concern at adapting her life to a new home because "people make their own lives wherever they are," and because "happiness and contentment are something that come from within."

The last time I saw Mrs. Frankfurter, I noted that she wore her bobbed hair in a simple arrangement and that obviously she preferred clothes with few frills. Although she was gracious, she was quiet and unassuming and totally unconscious of being a center of attention in the group of women who were clustered around her.

Return to Capital Is 'Home-Coming'

The daughter of a Congregationalist minister, she attended high school instead of a finishing school and completed that part of her study in 1908. Later, she went to Smith College, where she soon won recognition for brilliant scholarship and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. But unlike many girls of the studious type, she found time to devote some attention to school activities; was extremely popular, and was president of her class in her junior year. The next year she was president of student government.

After graduation, she obtained a position as secretary at the fashionable Spence School in New York and later, during the War, she turned her attention to Red Cross and training camp activities. This work brought her to Washington, where she met Felix Frankfurter; so coming to the Capital to live this time is, in a sense, a home-coming for both of them.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: The French Ambassador will entertain at dinner on February 10 . . . Miss Ruth Tuckerman will be hostess at a cocktail party on Sunday afternoon . . . Mrs. J. R. Bicker-Caarton, of The Hague, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs Baker. She plans to remain here until spring. On Sunday she will be feted at a party with Miss Louise Okie as hostess.

Semmer-Lawrence Nuptials Announced

The former Miss Lawrence is widely known in Washington. She formerly was diving champion for the District. Mr. Semmes attended Friends School here and Brown University.

White House Musicale Enlists 3 Artists

At the first of afternoon musicales at the White House this season, three artists appeared on the program preceding the tea at which Mrs. Roosevelt entertained on Tuesday afternoon. Earle Spicer, barytone, sang nine numbers, including some favorite English and American ballads. He was accompanied by Merl Freeland. Margaret Payson Blish, diseuse, gave three readings, including "The Literary Circle Meets," "The Gibson Girl" and "Ladies Lounge."

Dempsey, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Mrs. John O. Herrick, and Miss Ann Dahlman, sister of the hostess.

The next in the series of luncheons being given by wives of Cabinet members will take place tomorrow with Mrs. Henry A. Wallace as hostess.

Carlos del Mars Give Dinner for Margot Holmes

Mr. and Mrs. Carlos del Mar entertained at dinner last night in honor of Mrs. Margot Holmes, of England, who is staying at the Shoreham while on a visit to Washington. After dinner, at which 14 were present, Mr. del Mar showed some movies which he had taken of the gardens of several country houses which he and Mrs. del Mar visited with Mrs. Holmes on a recent trip to England.

Mr. and Mrs. del Mar will leave next month for a stay at Bel Air, Fla., near Palm Beach.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE SIDE of Washington which mosts interests women in other parts of the country is not politics, nor dscriptions of the city and its famous personalities, but accounts fo the social life. That's what the enterprising wives of members of Congress who helped their husbands by making campaign speeches discovered last summer.

Today some of these wives will meet with Mrs. Hugh Butler to continue the lessons in public speaking which she organized a year or so ago. They are going to be drilled in, among other things, the art of describing entertainingly the teas and dinners which make up the Capital whirl and spell glamour for the folks back home.

NO END of socially prominent residents in private life seem to be going in for public speaking. Many turned up yesterday for the first lesson in Mrs. Butler's series for non-Congressional people—among them Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mrs. Davis Barry, Miss Stellita Stapleton, and Mrs. Ernest Gruening. They are going to learn to make four kinds of speeches: Entertaining, informative, persuasive and impromptu—the last category, it seems, is not really impromptu at all, but the result of lots of hard work.

A RECENT thoughtful, kindly and disinterested act on the part of a certain man in public life, who next to Mrs. Roosevelt is probably the businest person in America, has just brought home to us again the fact that the more important a person is, the more apt he is to be kindly and considerate. It's the big people, more often than the little, we've learned, who can always find time to be pleasant.

As everyone knows, we are all "bothered" from time to time by "nuisances." People in public life are pursued by the press; for the rest of us there are book agents. Nobody is immune to being hounded at one time or another by somebody who wants something; yet everybody has the privilege of saying "No." Isn't it the least we can do to be civil about it? In denying a request, no more time is required to say those three little words, "but I'm sorry" than is needed to launch into a irritated harangue. Besides, it's so much easier on the blood pressure of everybody concerned.

SATURDAY NIGHT being the Chief Justice's evening for dining out, he is always booked up way in advance. The Associate Justice of the Supreme Court and Mrs. Standley Reed have already issued cards for a dinner in his honor February 25.

Society is being wined and dined within an inch of its life these days. Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin will be hosts next Wednesday in honor of Mrs. Louis Frothingham, of Boston, who visits them pretty ne arly every year . . . The French Ambassador, about the most hospitable of the foreign envoys, is entertaining this evening and again on Monday, January 30. The later night has also been selected by Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios for a dinner party. Add to the dinner hosts the Peruvian Ambassador, who has cards out for Thursday, February 16. Mrs. Chauncey Depew will entertain at a similar party February 9, and Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry will be hostess at luncheon on Saturday.

At the dinner which Mrs. Sutherland Mayo gave on Tuesday night for Mrs. Armstrong Gwynne, everybody showed up but the guest of honor, who is ill. She is staying with Commander and Mrs. William D. Thomas.

MRS. ROBERT LINCOLN O'BRIEN has joined Mr. O'Brien in their apartment at the Highlands. She has been in Boston, where Mr. O'Brien formerly was publisher of one of the leading papers. Their son, Robert, has followed in his father's footsteps and is editor and publisher of the Transcript, which for the past few years has been receiving drastic journalistic shots in the arm to restore it to former glory. Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien will give a dinner, January 28, at the Sulgrave Club.

PARTIES with a music angle: Mrs. Tracy Dows had a few friends in last evening following thes pecial invitation concert of the National Symphoney . . . Mrs. George Messersmith, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, will give a party for Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ormandy after the concert of the Philadelphia Symphony January 31.

A USUALLY "unimpeachable source of information" fell down on us the other day—and Mr. and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings are NOT the purchasers of the Hoover house on S street, as we reported. Sorry.

Notables Meet New Faces In 'At Homes'

Mrs. Morgenthau And Miss Perkins Are Hostesses

Despite the weather, a number of social notables and a scattering of "new faces" put in an appearance at one or both of the Cabinet "at homes" on schedule yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, received at her home on Thirteenth street, while Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins was hostess at the Sulgrave Club.

Greeting her guests in the drawing room, Mrs. Morgenthau wore a floor-length frock of black crepe, fashioned on simple lines with a shallow pencil-blue sequin vestee and set off with an orchid corsage. Standing with her was Mrs. John W. Hanes, wife of the Undersecretary of the Treasury, who was gowned in a floor-length black frock, worn with a small, red velvet hat.

Bouquets of iris, roses and African daisies decorated the living room, and a centerpiece of the same flowers was used on the dining room table, which was lighted with four tall cream tapers in silver holders.

A delicious menu, including dainty sandwiches, small cakes, hot fish balls and biscuits filled with ham and sausages, was one of the outstanding features of the reception.

Mrs. Chatfield Taylor At Tea Table

Assisting at the tea table in the early part of the party were Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, wife of the Fiscal Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the chairman of the RFC. Mrs. Taylor wore a quaint frock, made with a powder blue crepe jacket over a full skirt of eggplant taffeta. Mrs. Jones' tailored black dress was set off with a snappy wine felt hat, with a towering square crown and a bow of vari-colored velvet ribbon on the front.

Others who assisted in the afternoon were Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, Mme. Marc Peter, Mrs. Charles Henderson, Mrs. Stephen B. Gibbons, Mrs. William B. Bankhead, whose new spring hat, strawberry red and embellished with a matching veil, was particularly attractive; Mrs. Pat Harrison and Miss Anne Squire.

Secretary Perkins was unusually handsome in her frock of dark brown satin jersey, fashioned on simple lines. Her matching tricorne was trimmed with biege grosgrain ribbon and she wore a string of pearls that contrasted nicely with her ensemble.

Assisting the hostess at the tea table were Representative Mary T. Norton, whose tailored black suit and small hat were trimmed with Persian lamb; Mrs. William B. Bankhead, Mrs. Charles V. McLaughlin, Mrs. Marshall E. Dimock, Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, Mrs. J. M. Mead, Mrs. Pat Harrison, and Mrs. Blair Banister.

Among the guests, in addition to several who were seen also at Mrs. Morgenthau's, were Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, who was celebrating her birthday and wearing a goregous spray of orchids on her black suit; Representative Caroline O'Day, and her daughter, Miss Elia O'Day; Mrs. Joseph Byrne, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman; Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde; Dean and Mrs. Henry Grattan Dovle, Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Miss Carolyn Nash, Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Mme. Constantin Oumansky, Col. and Mrs. M. Mrs. Roosevelt Urges Women to Help Youth

She Exhorts Club Federation to 'Good Hard Work for Education' at Session Here; Calls for Courage, Fortitude

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

"Good hard work for education" and willingness to shoulder responsibility for conditions in the community were demanded of club women by Mrs. Roosevelt last night in an address before the board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, at its midwinter session in the Mayflower Hotel. Introduced by Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, of Portland, Oreg., the national president, she called on the club leaders from all sections of the country, to live for democracy with the courage and fortitude of the forefathers who established it.

"Women's greatest responsibility," said Mrs. Roosevelt, "is to help youth. I haven't much patience with those who are afraid of youth either as ndividuals or n organized groups."

Cting the fact there is a marked increase n migrant youth in this country within recent months, she declared, "This means every one of you are going to have to do some planning in your community. I am not anxious to see the problem rest on the shoulders of the Government. The reason it frequently does is because individuals are so often unwilling to do what is necessary."

She told of her contact with the young people of this and other countries at the American Youth Congress last summer and contradicted the charge made in a flood of protest that it was "communist controlled."

She decried the attitude that suppression of "'subversive talking" was a protection to democracy, and advocated instead, making democracy work—making life worth living under the government, and affording all people a basic feeling of security.

'Equal Chance' So Far an Ideal

Pointing out the necessity for education to equip people to choose their representatives intelligently, she said:

"Perhaps you think we have that kind of education. I want to tell you we haven't. To say all children have an equal chance for education is just nonsense. I know homes where only half the children have enough clothes to go to school. We must do some good, solid work on education if we want to keep democracy."

She urged the building up of connection between the schools and those who will be employers of the young people when they are graduated; more vocational guidance for youth and early study of aptitudes. "We haven't kept up in our training and education with the changing world," she said.

Telling of a family she had visited in the West Virginia mountains, which had been reduced to poverty when the mines closed but had not trusted anyone enough to appeal for help, she decared: "It is a severe commentary on the community that they had to wait for the President's wife to come, to find a solution for their problem."

She told the women of the federation that, because of their far-reaching influence, they had a grave responsibility for democracy.

Citizenship Head Urges Study of 'Isms'

At an earlier session of the board, Mrs. F. H. Clausen, of Horicon, Wis., new chairman of citizenship, had urged the clubwomen to study communism and fascism along with democracy in order to awaken the country to the advantages of American citizenship.

There has been hesitancy in American schools about teaching communism and fascism, declared Mrs. Clausen as she outlined a three-year program. "But if the systems are studied side by side with the Government of the United States, and equal emphasis given," she said, "there will be no question of the benefits under democracy."

Dr. John M. Cassels, director of the institute for consumer education at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., earlier yesterday urged the women leaders to do "more conscious thinking" about consumer relationships and exercise "more conscious social control" in economic affairs.

"The day has passed," he said, "when economists or anyone else can pin their faith merely to developments and adjustments in the open market. There must be some organization of consumers . . . Some sort of consumer education must be achieved."

Methodist Home Debt Paid Off Ahead of Goal

Nearly four months before the date set for reaching the goal, the board of trustees and board of lady managers of the Methodist Home for the Aged have announced the entire debt on the institution has been cleared. Mrs. Harry Haskinson is president of the board of lady managers and Mr. Haskinson of the board of trustees. Irving O. Ball is vice president and treasurer of the latter.

Conservation Split Looms In Assembly

O'Conor Proposal on Natural Resources Meets Opposition; 17 Bills Submitted

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18.—An old legislative bugaboo—conservation—reared up in the General Assembly today, temporarily overshadowing the Administration's high-speed efforts to get its reorganization program under way.

Overnight, the problem of what to do about Maryland's natural resources became the prospective No. 1 battle of the 1939 Legislature.

Although working otherwise in apparent surface harmony, speeding Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor's legislation into the hoppers at machine-gun speed, blocs were forming rapidly in both Houses and Senate to oppose the O'Conor plans for the conservation commission.

Other Trouble-makers

As secondary potential trouble-makers, Administration proposals for reorganizing the State roads commission, the labor department and the accident commission popped up for attention.

Principal reorganization bills introduced today were aimed at revision of the justice of the peace system in Baltimore and the counties, involving creation of Peoples Courts. The bills provide for a Constitutional amendment which will be submitted to the voters at the next election.

Nineteen members of the House joined in dropping a conservation bill into the hopper, well ahead of the plan which the Administration is whipping into bill form. Their measure has the backing of wild life and sportsmen's organizations.

Make-Up Is Different

Both bills, however, follow the same general plan, requiring creation of a seven-man unpaid conservation commission to work with and advise a salared director. The sportsmen's bill, however, would have the advisory commission name the director; the administrative measure would make the director a gubernatorial appointee.

In the creation of a subdivision, too, the bills differ in details, with the independent measure listing a division of education and public relations which is not included in the Administrations proposal.

Conservationists and would-be conservationists were engaged in hot debate by midafternoon, and the trend of debate indicated that, for the first time, the legislators were at odds on such fundamentals of both plans as the advisory commission.

Even leaders identified closely with O'Conor's forces were apparently swinging around to oppose a multimember group, some preferring one commissioner, others yielding to a possible three-man advisory commission.

The consensus seemed to be that it would be difficult to find seven fully qualified persons to serve without salary.

O'Conor, meanwhile, said his recommended conservation bill probably would not be ready before the end of the week or early next week.

17 Bills in Hopper

Today's session duplicated last night's in unusual freedom from legislative delay. In all, 17 bills were dropped into the House and Senate, 10 in the lower branch and 7 in the upper. The Senate was in session a little more than an hour, while the House finished its business in 35 minutes.

Both adjourned until noon tomorrow.

About two hours after the legislators had scattered throughout the Statehouse to organize committees, Chairman J. Glenn Beall of the Statt roads commission accompanied Auditor William A. Codd and Thomas Jennifer, special assistant attorney general, assigned to the commission, arrived for a conference with the Governor.

They presented a detailed summary of the commission's financial position, its contract commitments and prospective commitments—a statement the Governor demanded from the roads unit last Sunday.

O'Conor said later he would have to study the voluminous report and break down the figures before making them public.

Commission Submits 16 District Bills

Taxi Limit to 2,500, Loan Shark 'Purge' Among Measures Sent To Budget Bureau

Sixteen District bills, including measure to limit the number of taxicabs to 2,500 and one to purge the District of "loan sharks" were sent to the Budget Bureau yesterday by the Commissioners. Should the bureaus approve the legislation they will be sent immediately to Congress.

Introduced last year, the bill to limit the number of cabs is to relieve traffic congestion and afford the remaining operators an increase in earnings. At present there are more than 4,000 taxicabs. The reduction, it is explained, would be accomplished by refusing any further licenses, the voluntary retirement from operation of existing licenses and by revocation where violations occur.

Two years ago the Commissioners sought a revision of the small loan act, recommending a flat 12 per cent fee. The same bill has been approved by the Commissioners.

Another proposed bill would give the Commissioners authority to name District streets. At present the Commissioners may only change the names of streets if a duplication exists, otherwise an act of Congress is necessary.

The Commissioners have a bill relating to condemnation proceedings for the acquisition of land for streets. Under the existing law it is necessary that the damages awarded, plus all the costs and expenses of the proceedings, shall be assessed by the jury as benefits. The Commissioners said instances are now arising where the District is unable to open alleys or minor streets, because it is impossible to find benefits to the extent of the damages and cost of proceedings.

An increase from five to nine in the number of appointments to the United States Military Academy is also requested by the Commissioners in a proposed bill. It is pointed out there are eight States which have a population less than that of the District, yet each of these States is allowed from 15 to 20 cadets at the Military Academy.

Other Measures

The Commissioners have recommended a bill which empowers them eventually to determine the hours when street lamps should be lighted and when they should be extinguished.

Other bills submitted follow:

To authorize the Commissioners to reappoint David R. Thompson and Ralph S. Warner to the Police Department. They were dismissed from the force in 1934. A recent survey, it was said, has indicated "there were not sufficient evidence to justify the dismissal of these two policemen."

A bill to authorize the sale of certain real estate no longer required for public purposes.

A bill to establish reasonable fire and lightning insurance rates in the District by giving to the superintendent of insurance authority to regulate and control the rates of all local companies.

A bill to reduce the margin of error allowed in the measurement of electric current from 4 to 2 per cent, which is the amount allowed in the measurement of gas.

To change the date of issuance of licenses for sightseeing buses from November 1 to March 1 to coincide with the date of issuance of registration tags.

A bill to provide that each teacher shall designate a beneficiary or beneficiaries to whom the amount of his deductions shall be payable in the event of death.

A bill to provide for the appointment of research assistants in the public schools.

To provide alternate methods of enforcement of rules, orders and regulations of the joint board of the Public Utilities Commission.

Army Survey of Proposed Channel Pushed; Roads Board Is Foe

By the Associated Press.

The Board of Army Engineers said yesterday a report on the survey of a proposed waterway from Chesapeake Bay through Accomac County, Va., to the Atlantic was due in March.

Should the board, on the basis of the report, find the waterway desirable, ample time would remain to incorporate the project in any river and harbor bill which might be enacted this session, officials said.

Provision for the examination and survey was carried in the 1938 River and Harbor act. Representative Bland (Democrat), Virginia, had it inserted at the request of advocates of the development.

Hearings were held on the proposal last week at Accomac Courthouse before District Engineer W. A. Johnson.

The waterway was sought to provide a means of ingress and egress for vessels of the fisheries fleet. Some opposition developed because of the resultant cost to the State highway department and the Pennsylvania Railroad for providing bridges across the proposed channel.

Dr. Llewellyn Powell, coroner, declared Webber had died of strangulation.

He was the son of Mrs. Gertrude Webber, 319 North Royal street, Alexandria, and until a short time ago had been employed as a driver by the Alexandria Dairy Co.

EARLY, NATS CATCHER, SHOT WHILE HUNTING

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Gastonia, N. C., Jan. 18.—His love for hunting North Carolina rabbits almost cost Jake Early a chance to make good in major league baseball with the Nats for the promising young catcher yesterday suffered a self-inflicted bullet wound in his left leg.

Late in the afternoon Early decided to go into the fields surrounding his father-in-law's estate near here. Just before he reached the hunting grounds, the youth was forced to jump across a small ditch. As he sprung to the other side the 22-caliber rifle he carried discharged and the bullet struck him in the fleshy part of his leg, above the knee.

Receives First Aid

Fortunately the missile lodged in the fleshy part of his leg and after receiving first-aid treatment he was returned to his home. His wound is expected to be fully healed by the time the call for rookies sounds next month.

Young Early, who batted .320 for Charlotte in the Piedmont League last season, is highly regarded by Clark Griffith. The Nat president last season predicted stardom for the tall, rugged left-hander.

Early was given spring trials last year and the year before with Washington, but on each occasion the abundance of catchers on hand and Early's own inexperience resulted in his being farmed out.

His signed contract was received by the Nationals last week.

Miss Berg Has 83, but Holds Augusta Lead

Remains Six Strokes Ahead as Winds Send Scores Soaring

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 18.—The course and a cold wind dealt rudely with Patty Berg today but she managed to reach the three-quarter mark six strokes ahead of the field in the Augusta Titlists' Golf Tournament.

The chunky little national champion from Minneapolis struggled through to an 83 that gave her 78-78-83—239 with only 18 more holes to go.

Dorothy Kirby, husky young Georgia champion from Atlanta was the only one who made any closer approach to women's par of 75 over the hilly country club course. She carded an 82 that went with 82-81 for a 245 total that lifted her from fifth to second place.

Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., slid from second to fourth when she blew herself to an 88 for a 54-hole total of 248. Mrs. Helen Hicks Harb, of Little Rock, Ark. gained clear title to third with an 85 that gave her 247 so far.

Kathryn Hemphill, long hitter from Columbia, S. C., couldn't steer her shots any too well and could do no better than an 87 that left her at 249. The rest of the field was strung from 257 backward.

New Yank Boss Will Continue On Same Basis

Dispells Fear That 'Farm System' Will Be Curtailed

By the United Press.

New York, Jan. 18.—Edward G. Barrow, new president of the world champion Yankees, made his first important revelation regarding the club's policies today when he said, "Our farm system will be continued on its current basis."

That statement banished fears that Barrow might start lopping off some of the Yankee "chain stores" following the death of Owner Jacob Ruppert. It is well known in baseball that the big gruff man with the heavy eyebrows long has been skeptical of the value of minor league farms.

The statement indicated also that the Yankees, under the new Barrow regime, would not try to blossom out with a more extensive farm system.

"I believe we have the proper minor league set-up now," he said.

The burly man in the brown suit looked calmly through his spectacles across his big mahogany desk and continued: "Some people have gone in over their heads on farm clubs. We won't do that. We're just about right now."

The 71-year-old president mentioned no names, but it was apparent that he was referring to the extensive chain store system operated by Branch Rickey and Sam Breadon of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Barrow, whose exterior is far more formidable than his mollowed personality, admitted: "For many years I doubted the value of farm clubs. I came to the Yankees in 1921, and we won several pennants before branching out into farms about six years ago. I was a firm believer in a top-notch scouting system. And I still am. But the success of our farm system under George Weiss convinced me that a proper farm system is needed by oud club. Weiss, a man of unusual ability, sold me on the idea."

Barrow admitted that the Yanks' farm system is now paying for itself, and in addition is providing an important source for future major league stars. In the search for talent it co-operates admirably with the scouting staff.

But what about Babe Ruth? Barrow smiled and said: "I naturally haven't had time to think about the Babe yet. So I can't very well answer that question. However, our organization is quite complete right now, and I believe very competent. And you know, it would be quite cricket to fire someone to make a job for Ruth, in spite of my affection for the Babe."

Tony Galento 3-to-1 Choice Over Brescia

'Two Ton' Would Prove His Boasts Tonight In 10-Round Bout

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 18.—Tony Galento, whose blatant boasts have left many a fight fan still unconvinced of the awful destruction the 2-ton brawler says he could wreak on "dat bum Joe Louis," hopes to prove tomorrow night he's more than a comic windbag.

"It's "knock out or shut up" for Tony when he meets Jorge Brescia, the under-dog from down Argentina way, and it'll have to be a quick sleeping potion if Tony wants to talk any more about meeting the heavyweight champ.

Tony, who is quoted a 3-to-1 favorite for the 10-round bout at the Armory, threw out his barrel chest tonight, flailed his ham-like hands through the smoky air of his side-street beer stube in Orange, and vowed he would flatten Brescia in quicker time than did Joe Louis. Louis kayoed Brescia in the third round.

"Da guy's just another bum dat tinks he can fight," said the self-styled "Baron of Swat," seeking his ninth straight knockout victory and his fourth since recovering from broncho-pneumonia.

Brescia, 6 foot 2 and scaling 215, had another idea. He said he would take the steam out of the Jersey water buffalo in two rounds with the potent right hand that staggered Louis, and then box his way to an easy decision.

Galento, who will climb through the ropes with about 230 pounds of beef draped on his 5-feet-8 frame, is ranked No. 1 contender for Joe Louis' heavyweight crown by the National Boxing Association.

Promoter Harry Mendel reported advance sales today at almost $5,000 and said he looks for a crowd of 11,000, which would be the biggest in New Jersey in more than eight years.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 18.—Merrill M. Lord, of Washington, D. C., qualified for match play in the annual Miami-Biltmore Country Club men's golf championship here today. He turned in a card of 41-44—85. Bob Servis, of Dayton, Ohio, the defending champion, and Chick Harbett, of Battle Creek, Mich., finished in a tie for first place.

Rallying on the closing holes, Servis bagged two birdies and a par, to come in with 36-37—73, while Harbett posted 37-36—73. In third place, with 35-39—74, was Tim Moore, of Miami Beach.

Just barely entering the select circle, with 43-38—81, was Wilford Wehrle, of Racine, Wis., the Western amateur champion.

Bob Wilson Fights In Arena's Feature

Bob Wilson, two-headed belter who is on the comeback trail, was signed yesterday as one of the first fighters Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn has contracted since he decided to limit his bouts in the future to local and club fighters. Wilson has won his last two bouts here, rising from the canvas to whip Frankie Wills some time ago and earning the duke over El Brookman last Monday night.

Wilson's opponent will be Harvey Massey, New York clubber, a young welterweight whose chief claim to fame was his bout with the Cocoa Kid. The affair will be a six-rounder.

George Washington Girl Riflists in Team Workouts

Practice and Inter-Class Matches Determine Team for Stiff Schedule

Unlike the major league baseball teams which develop material by farming players out to smaller teams in the minors, George Washington University has a system all its own for producing crack women rifle shooters.

Since the varsity team is limited to the ten best marksmen in the school and so many other girls of potential varsity talent would otherwise be overlooked, Coach Mrs. Helen Hanford has organized three class teams.

These teams, freshman, sophmore and junior-senior, practice daily as does the varsity and as an incentive to the girls, major and minor letters are offered to those attaining a fixed total of points.

The points are earned by performances in practice tests and in inter-class matches which are in progress now and will continue until January 27.

Girls showing exceptional ability are promoted to the varsity at the first possible opportunity.

Meanwhile the varsity squad is preparing for an ambitious schedule which is opened with a match against Pennsylvania on February 11. In March the Colonials are slated to face Missouri, Indiana, Maryland and Drexel Institute of Philadelphia.

Hilltop Nine Plays 19 Games Next Spring

American U., Yale, Pitt Newcomers on G. U. Schedule

Georgetown University's baseball team will play a 19-game schedule next spring, according to announcement yesterday by H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics.

Newcomers to the slate are American University, which will be met in the opener, April 4, and Pittsburgh and Yale.

Conspicuous by its absence from the schedule is Princeton, a foe of many years' standing. Conflict of dates necessitated the dropping of the Tigers.

Next season will mark Joe Judge's third as diamond coach at the Hilltop. The former Nationals' firstbaseman has enjoyed unusual success. His team was undefeated in 1937 and lost but four games last year.

End Coach to Take Engineering Post; Praised by Bergman

Vinnie Fraatz, end football coach at Catholic University since 1935, yesterday tendered his resignation to Athletic Director A. J. Bergman to accept an engineer's position with United States Housing Authority.

Bergman expressed sorrow at the loss of Fraatz whose expert handling of the line in 1935 was a prime factor in the Cardinals' most successful season in recent years which was capped with an Orange Bowl victory over Mississippi.

Bergman said, "It is indeed a great loss, but I wouldn't stand in the way on Vinnie's obtaining a better position."

Fraatz was graduated from Catholic University in 1932 after having starred on the gridiron and track.

Bergman said he had no one under consideration to fill the vacancy and probably would not move to procure another man until next football season.

Howard Beats Johnson C. Smith

Howard University Bisons scored their second C. I. A. A. victory in four starts in Howard gymnasium last night, defeating Johnson C. Smith, of Charlotte, N. C., 62 to 40, in a free-scoring melee.

The locals led, 31 to 16, at halftime, and the Golden Bulls were never within 15 points of the Howard five during the second period.

Mungo, Waner, Greenberg Top Holdouts

Russ Van Atta Also Sends Back Offer Of St. Louis Browns

By the Associated Press.

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 18.—A bumper crop of baseball holdouts is sprouting this winter in the Florida sunshine.

It may be opening day or ater before the names of Van Lingle Mungo, Joe Stripp, Paul Waner, Hank Greenberg, Russ Van Atta and other members of the Florida colony are signed to contracts.

In recent years Dizzy Dean's squabbles with the St. Louis Cardinals attracted the most attention, but now that old Diz has agreed without a murmur to a Chicago Cub offer, Mungo has taken over the lead.

Cut for Mungo

Twice now the pitcher has sent back unsigned contracts to the Brooklyn Dodgers with the declaration: "I'll spend the summer at Pageland, S. C., rather than take an $11,000 salary cut."

The offer of a performance bonus tacked to a $5,000 salary failed to smooth the irate Mungo, who said "they won't let you work enough to earn a bonus."

Other early recruits who joined the holdout squad by sending back unsigned contracts are Stripp and Van Atta.

Infielder Stripp not only did not like the salary offered but has a quarrel with the Dodgers on another count—claiming the club owes him $750 for players obtained from his baseball school here.

Over at St. Petersburg, Van Atta declared he was not a holdout even though he had not agreed to the terms offered.

Van Atta Objects

"The St. Louis Browns sent me the same contract I had last year when I took a $1,000 pay cut because of the injury to my arm," the pitcher said. "However, late in the season I was going good again, finishing strong with four out of five victories and I feel that my salary cut should be restored this year."

The fireworks may start any day now at Sarasota when Paul Waner receives his first offer from the Pittsburgh Pirates. Since a salary cut is expected to be sought because of "Big Poison's " 1938 slump.

Down at Miami Beach Greenberg often has expressed the belief a ball player should get all the money he can while he is at his peak because salaries drop fast when the star begins to fade.

After hitting 58 home runs last year the first baseman is certain to ask the Detroit Tigers for a healthy sum.

Cooke, Mulloy Advance at Net

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 18 (AP).—Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., and Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, only seeded players in action today, advanced to the second round of the annual Miami Biltmore tennis championships.

Cooke, ranked sixth nationally and seeded third in this tourney, defeated Stewart Kenyon, Miami, former professional who had been reinstated to amateur ranks, 6—3, 6⅓. Mulloy, former intercollegiate champion, seeded fourth, easily eliminated A. J. Peter Strassburger, Philadelphia, 6—1, 6—2.

Florida U. Considers Pitt Man as Coach

Cooper Cracks Course Mark by 4 Shots in Qualifying Round

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Jan. 18.—Shattering par, the course, record and the competition offered by some 200 other contestants, little Harry Cooper, of Chicopee, Mass., turned in a 65 today to lead the field at the halfway mark of 36-hole qualifying trials for the $5,000 San Francisco Match Play Open Golf Tournament.

Cooper's round, described by him as the greatest he ever shot, clipped six strokes off the par 71 Lakeside course. It cut four shots off the competitive record for the 6,432-yard layout, considered an exacting test fo golf.

McSpaden, Metz tee

He put together nines of 32-33. Par for the course is 35-36—71.

Four blows behind Cooper, equalling his former course record of 69, were Harold McSpaden, Winchester, Mass., with 34-35; Ben Hogan, White Plains, N. Y., and Dick Metz, of Chicago, both with 35-34.

Leo Walper, Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion from Washington, D. C., who took third place in the recent Augusta Open, turned in a one-over-par score of 72, and a like total tomorrow will put him well among the qualifiers.

Walper was out in par 35, starting with a birdie four after dropping a 5-foot putt. He was in trouble in the sixth, losing two strokes to regulation figures when he was trapped on his second and failed to reach the green with his third. An eight foot putt on the eighth hole brought Walper back to par.

The District professional went over par on the fourteenth hole of the back nine, hooking his second shot and aside from this slip, matched the card for the other eight holes.

Card:

Walper Out	443 464 424—35
Walper In	444 353 554—37. 72.

Sam Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., leading money winner for 1938, and Art Bell, of Monterey Park, Calif., equalled par with 36-35, the only others of the field to tie or better 71.

Doering Has 70

Leading amateur was Art Doering, jr., of Chicago, a Stanford University student, with 36-34—70. He tied with Lloyd Mangrum, Los Angeles, who had a pair of 35s, and Zell Eaton, Oklahoma City, and Lawson Little, San Francisco, each with 36-34.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

There is a growing and not entirely illogical impression that from October until April all big ball players ought to be put in confinement, if only for safekeeping. It's getting to be a rarity when yon descending sun does not set on the pain-wracked form of a bullet-riddled ball player whose hunting gun went off by mistake, or something.

Charley Gelbert set the fashion for hunting accidents among big leaguers several years ago when his quail-hunting artillery exploded at a time when he was carelessly pointing it at his own leg. The charge of birdshot all but caused the amputation of the leg and removed him from baseball for two seasons. Currently he is attempting a comeback, but at the time of his retirement he was the star shortstop of the unennantlwinning Cardinals.

For the past several years the hunting season has brought its quota of accidents to big leaguers who are addicted to guns and such, but the most notable case of late was the tragic mishap to Monty Stratton, star pitcher of the White Sox. In some manner a revolver Stratton was carrying in a holster on a hunting trip exploded and tore a bloody path through his right leg. The result? Amputation, the end of a pitching career, and the loss to the Chicago White Sox of a human chattel valued at no less than $100,000.

No Longer Trivial

No later than yesterday another shot rang out and another ball player suffered a leg wound. The victim this time was Jake Early, promising young catcher of the Washington club. Early was dragging his gun across the ice when he heard a loud report and discovered that he was shot in the leg. The injury was described as minor, in which case, of course, Early is fortunate.

It is no trivial matter, this business of the ball players and their semisuicide habits during the off-season. It has become so serious that the club owners are actually thinking seriously of curtailing the winter pastimes of their investments. The loss of Stratton to the White Sox can be easily measured in dollars and cents. It was equivalent to a $100,000 fire uncovered by insurance.

But apparently no measures that the club owners might take would be sufficient. The other day, for example, Mel Ott suffered an injury at his New Orleans home. He wired the Giants' office that he has suffered "an external injury to the left middle finger; small laceration to top of finger; abrasion over nail. Internal injury to left middle finger; small laceration to top of finger; abrasion over nail. Internal injury to left middle finger, fracture of distal tufy at terminal phalanx, with slight separation of fragment consisting of medial portion of the distal tuft."

Wondering whethir or not Ott would live, the Giants asked for added detail and learned that Ott had merely hurt his hand when he closed a door on it, but that he had sent them the doctor's highly technical report.

Which reminds us that the old-fashioned sore arm has now become "burstitis," with its implication of horror, and that ball players now have fancy names for everything from an attack of hangnail to the common cold.

That they can't be trusted to take care of themselves in the off-season has been, however, a long-established fact. There was the case not so many years ago of big Ed Morris, a pitcher who was headed for stardom with the Boston Red Sox. From Morris' Georgia home during the winter the Red Sox received news that Morris had been killed. It seems that he was attending a fish fry in his own honor at a neighboring farm and in an ensuing brawl he had been stabbed to death.

Owners Not Blameless

The club owners realize now that it is expecting too much from certain ball players to take care of themselves. They can't be trusted. This department was once an eyewitness to a typical case. Two left-handed pitchers on the Washington club, not particularly learned fellows and their arms apparently the only force between themselves and starvation, hauled an oversized rowboat along the beach for 100 yards at Biloxi for no reason other than to show their strength. Both came down with sore arms and weren't worth a dime to the Washington club that season. The next year they took a big cut in salary.

But the club owners are not entirely blameless in the matter. I mean in the matter of injuries to star players during the league season. With an absurd disregard for their investments, it is the club owners' practice to carry as trainers fellows who are little more than towel-swingers. The average big league trainer is not a graduate of any physical culture course, nor does he have the slightest professional knowledge of muscles or medicine, nor can he diagnose anything more intricate than a plainly broken leg.

With them, "charley horse," a word of their own invention, is a handy word. It covers every ailment from a ruptured blood vessel to a plain old-fashioned spike wound. Yet into their hands is given the treatment of ball players valued at several millions of dollars. The club owners, if they are thinking of restraining their players' off-season activities, ought to set their own house in order.

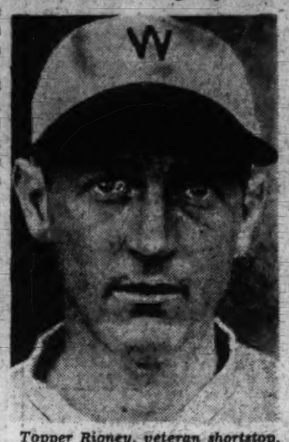
Bucky Harris

By Shirley Povich

Chapter Twelve

BUCKY HARRIS' DREAM of three straight pennants for the Washington club turned night-marish in mid-season of 1926. He saw the pitching staff that had been the club's most potent factor in '24 and '25 crumple almost en masse.

Walter Johnson, winner of 43 games in 1924-25 while incurring only 14 defeats, failed for the second time in 17 years to attain a .500 percentage. Stanley Coveleskie, the league leader in '25, when he won 20 games, was done up as a big leaguer in 1926, winning only a half-dozen victories. Dutch Ruether, the leading left-hander in the league in '25, was released to the Yankees in mid-season.



Topper Rigney, veteran shortstop, for whom Bucky Harris traded Buddy Myer to Washington in 1927 in ill-starred deal

The Nats finished fourth in 1926 and Harris set about to rebuild. With his pitching staff a doubtful one, he sought more power at bat and welcomed the signing of Tris Speaker, who had been cast out as manager of the Cleveland Indians in the wake of his exoneration of a betting scandal. The Washington club paid Speaker $30,000 for his services in 1927.

It was during the season of '27 that Harris made the deal that made him famous in a distasteful sort of way. He traded Buddy Myer to the Boston Red Sox for Shortstop "Topper" Rigney. In that deal Harris was yielding to the judgment of his friend and confidant, Speaker. The former Cleveland manager who was welcomed to a place on the Washington board of strategy, was of the opinion that Washington could win the 1927 pennant if it had a capable shortstop.

Young Myer, who had been bought by the Nats from New Orleans in 1925 for $25,000, reported in time to play third base in three World Series games that year after Ossie Bluege had been beaned by Vic Aldridge, of the Pirates. With the start of the 1926 season, Bluege returned to third base and Myer was utilized as a shortstop. He played the position all season, batting .304, but his fielding was weak. He was erratic and showed no liking for the shortstop job. In the minors he had played only second and third.

SPEAKER SUGGESTED THAT RIGNEY could be acquired from Boston in exchange for Myer and Harris made the deal. He realized his mistake almost instantly. Rigney reported with a bruised back and was of little value to the club. He had been a good ballplayer at Detroit and Boston, but with the years taking their toll he failed to stick with the Nats.

Then began a period of experimentation with the shortstop job by Harris. With Peckinpaugh having slowed to the point where he was finally traded to the White Sox, Bucky attempted to struggle along with a pair of rookies, Bob Reeves and Grant Gillis. Reeves couldn't field and Gillis couldn't hit. Paradoxically, Myer was making a splash as a third baseman with the Red Sox, and ended up as an acknowledged star, leading the league in stolen bases.

Early in the spring of 1927, a month before the season opened, any pennant hopes that Bucky Harris may have been harboring for his Nats were cruelly shattered. Walter Johnson, pitching in batting practice at Tampa, was struck by a line-drive off the bat of Joe Judge.

Dozens of times in his big-league career, Johnson had similarly been struck by line drives. With other pitchers, too, it was a common occurrence. A few moments of sharp pain, a swelling, ice packs and the pitcher is little the worse. On this occasion, as Johnson toppled to the ground holding his leg in pail, Clown-Coach Al Schacht rushed to the mound and playfully counted ten in the manner of a fight referee.

Schacht did not know at the time nor did Harris or the 30-odd other Nats, that the Nats' clown was actually counting ten over the 21-year pitching career of the greatest hurler of all time. Because Johnson's leg was broken and he came back from the South on crutches. That year he made a few futile attempts to pitch with an iron brace on the broken leg, and then announced his retirement.

ONLY BECAUSE OF THE SPECTACULAR relief pitching of Fred Marberry and Garland Braxton did the Nats finish third in 1927. Marberry, by now recognized as the greatest relief pitcher in the history of baseball, shattered all records for activity by a pitcher by participating in 64 games during the year. Braxton was acquired by Harris in 1926 in the deal which sent Dutch Ruether to New York. He blossomed as the perfect left-handed running mate for Marberry.

Relates Harris: "No manager ever had such a pair of relief artists at his beck and call. When one of our starting pitchers was in trouble it was a joy to know that both Marberry and Braxton were warming up in the bull pen. A right-hander with a great fast ball and a left-hander with curve and control. They stopped many a batting rally cold. If I wanted somebody who could blow a ball past a hitter, I called on Fred. If a fast-ball hitter was at bat I merely motioned for Braxton. He had the best control I had ever seen in a left-hander. He pitched the same kind of a screwball that Carl Hubbell made famous. I believe there were times when Braxton's screwball was better than Hubbell's."

In 1928, Bucky Harris again had his team in the first division, but it was no longer a pennant contender. The name of Walter Johnson no longer figured in the Washington box scores. The Big Train, never recovering fully from his fractured leg, had retired from the big leagues and accepted the management of the Newark Bears. Goose Goslin led the league in hitting, but Harris was beset by pitching troubles. Goslin, save for his hitting, was of little value to the team. His throwing arm suddenly went dead and he played the outfield only because of the assistance of Shortstop Bobby Reeves who relayed all of Goslin's throws.

And Washington fans, in the best traditions of fans everywhere, were displaying their fickleness. Spoiled by two straight pennants and hungry for more, they had taken to booing Bucky Harris. Rumors flew that Harris had gone social and high-hat following his marriage at the end of the 1926 season to Elizabeth Sutherland, daughter of Senator Sutherland of West Virginia, a high-society affair which was attended by the late President Coolidge and Cabinet members.

HARRIS WAS HAVING HIS WORST year in the big leagues. He was definitely slowing up. He played in only 99 games and batted a meager .204. His errors were greeted with boos and he heard shouts of "Take him out." The same fans who had lavished their praises on him in 1925-26 had turned on him wolfishly.

Reports gained credence that Bucky had traded Myer to the Red Sox in the fear that Buddy would take over his second-base job. The charges that Harris had become a society snob were launched by a Philadelphia baseball writer who had taken a violent dislike to Bucky. He filled his columns with stories of Harris' snobbishness and Washington fans took up the chant.

"Everything descended on me at once," relates Bucky. "I was supposed to be high-hat, I was supposed to have had a personal feud with Buddy Myer, and I was supposed to be error-proof out there in the field. And because I was having my worst season, it went hard with me. I knew I was slowing up. I couldn't cover the ground I used to. But I knew why. My legs simply went back on me. All those years I spent pounding my feet on hard basketball floors were taking their toll. Playing basketball was the greatest mistake I ever made."

Owner Clark Griffith, of the Nats, who had been paying Harris $30,000 a year to manage the club for the past three seasons, was painfully aware of the manner in which the Washington fans had turned on his erstwhile boy wonder. Attendance had fallen off and fans were souring on the team.

A few days after the close of the season, Griffith sent for Harris. At the end of a half-hour conference, Bucky Harris walked from the club owner's office no longer manager of the Nats and jobless, until 12 hours later.

(Another Bucky Harris article will appear tomorrow.)

Roanoke Five Trims Generals by 40-21

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—Roanoke College's great basket ball team practically clinched its second straight championship of the Old Dominion here tonight, subduing Washington and Lee, 40 to 21, before 2,800 spectators, breaking last year's record attendance these two established in the local auditorium.

Warneke Puts Name On Cardinal Contract

St. Louis, Jan. 18 (AP).—A veteran—Pitcher Lon Warneke—and a rookie second baseman—Jack Sturdy—signed their contracts with the St. Louis Cardinals today.

Warneke, who won 13 games and lost 8 last season, reported that he was in good shape. He will get an early start on spring training by serving for a week or two as one of the instructors at a baseball school in Hot Springs, Ark.

The Cardinals purchased Sturdy from their Rochester farm last fall. He is highly regarded by Manager Ray Blades, who also is making the jump from Rochester to St. Louis this year.

Titles in 7 Classes to Be Decided

Trophies and Medals To Winning Teams; Starts Next Month

Tournament basketball, that hotbed of action with its accompanying chills and thrills, again will be the medium of deciding the various Washington court championships. The board of managers of the District A. A. U. last night voted to co-operate with The Washington Post again in staging the ardent competition that has climaxed the last 14 basketball campaigns in this section.

As usual basketball players of all sizes and shapes will vie for the coveted titles and as ual The Washington Post will present the winning club in each division with a handsome trophy emblematic of the championship. Individual team members will be awarded the regulation District A. A. U. gold medals.

In meeting with The Post's basketball representative at the Y. M. C. A. last night, members of the basketball commmittee laid initial plans expected to make the 1939 tournament the biggest and best in the history of the event which was contested even before the formation of the local branch of the A. A. U.

From a hurriedly arranged tournament in a small gymnasium in 1925, the championship competition has gained momentum. Thousands have thrilled to the "dog eat dog" battles in recent years, and many local and national court stars received their first tests under fire in the titular battles.

Winfree Johnson, chairman of the basketball committee, urges all teams to prepare for the tournament, which will begin probably during the last week in February. As usual, the tourney will be open to local and nearby amateur teams, and competitions wil be in seven classes, two for girls and women and five for malec lubs, ranging from the lightest weights to the unlimited class.

Wilson Teachers Entertain Carolina Five in Local Gym

By Jack Munhall.

It will be something of the irresistible force against the movable object tonight as Villanova, carrying a two-game winning streak and a record of eight victories in ten games, meets Catholic University, struggling under the load of five straight losses, at C. U. in the feature of a three-game schedule for local quintets. The game starts at 8:15.

Georgetown's once-beaten Hoyas journey to Baltimore for a return engagement with Loyola which held them to a surprising 34-37 score here recently, and Wilson Teachers College exposes a two-game winning streak to North Carolina State Teachers at the local gym.

Villanova, rapidly rising as a foremost Eastern sports power as reflected in two consecutive undefeated football campaigns and in its basket ball record of 25 victories in 30 games last season, will be heavy favorites over Fod Cotton's Cardinals.

The Wildcats, including in their starting line-up Lloyd Rice, former Georgetown Prep star, opened their season by beating Roanoke, the little school which amazed local fans by twice outclassing George Washington, and also won over Loyola of Baltimore, Rider College, Albright and Baltimore University.

Then, temporarily, the Pennsylvanians fell upon evil times and absorbed successive lickings from Illinois and undefeated Loyola of Chicago before bouncing back to take games from Dickinson and St. John's of Annapolis.

In those last two games, although the opposition was not too exacting, the Wildcats showed great strength in rolling up 112 points while yielding only 42. They beat Dickinson, 55-28, and St. John's, 55-14.

If the Wildcats' impressive record were not sufficient cause for grief to the Cardinals it is significant to note that they will be at full strength for the first time since December 17. "Duke" Duzminsky, veteran guard and the leading scorer in the Philadelphia district last season, has recovered from a knee injury sustained in the game with Baltimore and is ready for action.

Villanova's star is reported to be "Long Lou" Dubino, whose remarkable flair for ball-handling and trick shots necessitated the shift of "Big Jim" Montgomery from center to forward to make a place in the line-up for him.

Roosevelt Has Little Trouble With Bethesda

West Scores 20 Points as Riders Win, 45 to 22

Allan Vogt, coach of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase cage team, said yesterday after his boys had absorbed a 45-22 defeat at the hands of Roosevelt, "There is the team that should win the inter-high series in a walk."

George West, Roosevelt's flashy forward, hung up two season records yesterday afternoon on the Rider floor, as his team issued a 45-to-22 lacing to the basketball squadron of Bethesda-Chevy Chase. The 20 points he poured through the loop was the highest number tallied by any individual player in a scholastic game this season, and the 12 points he registered in succession for Roosevelt in the first and second periods was better than any courtman has done in the last two years.

It was Bethesda's seventh straight defeat in nine starts this season, though by far the most top-heavy. The victory gave Roosevelt an even slate in games played to date, three triumphs and three losses.

Bethesda Shows Fight

Despite the accuracy and frequency of West's baskets in the opening period, Bethesda trailed by only 12 to 9 at the whistle. West had scored the first 2-pointer of the game, paused briefly while Hymie Perlo, his running mate, dropped a fancy set shot, and then proceeded to score the next 12 points for the Rough Riders.

After four minutes of the second period, neither team had scored, so West took the job unto himself, dropping two snowbirds in the space of 30 seconds. He was replaced by Ritchie Goodman, a sophomore, at that point, but when the first half totals were computed, West was responsible for 14 points of the 18-10 lead Roosevelt held. He missed only two attempted goals in the first half.

Margin Grows Greater

Under the guidance of Bill Robertson and Ernie Travis, Roosevelt continued to widen the margin in the second half, at one time holding a 45-18 lead. Substitute Russ Mizell, forward of the suburbanites, added four points for Bethesda to end scoring.

In an attempt to find a better starting combination, Coach Allan Vogt started Bob Lebling, Mizell and Barnesley in place of his regulars, Jim Kinsman, Whalen and Hollis. The move seemed to backfire, as Roosevelt took a 6-0 lead before Bethesda players started working together.

Navy Beats Penn Five By 32 to 22

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18.—Navy defeated Penn's visiting courtmen here today, 32 to 22, after the game was set back nearly an hour due to visitors being delayed by the storm.

Navy took twice as many shots as the Penn courtmen and counted on five more field goals, each team scoring eight times from the charity stripe. Penn was ragged and their offense was broken time and again by alert defensive tactics of the hosts.

Chuck Diven, smallest of the Quakers, paced their impotent attack with seven points.

Fast Passing Feature Of 0-0 Court Game

Vicksburg, Miss., Jan. 18 (AP).—Vicksburg High School's basketball team rode 60 miles to Canton yesterday to play Canton High School's quintet—and vice versa.

Although each team found a dark gymnasium at journey's end, the coaches decided the game that wasn't played ought to be down in the books some way so they agreed to this entry:

Vicksburg, 0; Canton, 0.

V. P. I Meets Virginia in Ring Feature

Techmen May Extend Favored Cavaliers At Charlottesville

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 18.—The University of Virginia boxers, tuning up for their first home meet of the season, look for rugged competition when the Virginia Tech ring team comes here for Saturday night's engagement.

New strength in the upper weights presents the chief worry for Johnny Larowe and his Cavaliers. From the 155-pound class through the heavyweight division, as well as several weights below, the Tech entries are impressive. Heading the list are the football players, Dave Pitts, light heavy, and Jim Gaugler, unlimited.

In the 155-pound class is Jimmy Woolwine, sophomore from Abingdon, who will be matched with Truman Southall, Virginia's junior star. Although coming up to his first varsity bout, Woolwine brings with him an undefeated freshman record.

The veteran Frank Oliver, of Lynnhaven, who is starting his third year as a varsity regular and holds a winning margin for the two previous years, represents Tech in the 165-pound class. His opponent is likely to be Roy Bowman, who lost at Syracuse last week, when Syracuse and Virginia fought to a 4-to-4 tie.

Although making his first varsity start, Pitts, a native of Columbia and captain-elect of football at Blacksburg, was an undefeated freshman boxer in 1937. His foe will be either Fenton Somerville, losing Virginia entry at Syracuse, or Edwin Parker, whose past experience is also limited to one bout.

Gaugler, who won seven dual bouts and lost one as a freshman and sophomore, returns to Tech's heavyweight position after an absence of a year. Virginia's representative in the top weight will be Art Bryant, winner of his first varsity bout in the Syracuse meet.

Slated to appear in the 120-pound class for Tech is Billy Austin, of Roanoke, who will make his first varsity start against Virginia's Platon Gailey, also a winner in his varsity debut at Syracuse. Fred Jackson, of Bluefield, W. Va., Tech junior, is listed for Ben Jacobs, Virginia's third-year man in the 125-pound clash.

Red Raiders Trip W. and L. By 24-7 Count

Price Paces Western To Sixth Triumph At Arlington Gym

Western High basketmen made their final start before entering the interhigh race last night, whipping Washington-Lee High, of Arlington, 24-7, on the losers' court. The victory gave the Red Raiders a record of six victories in seven games this season.

It was the slowest, lowest-scoring effort the Westerners have turned in. Neither team was able to make enough headway in the initial period to keep the crowd from yawning. Western led, 2-1, at the end of the first quarter, but Jack Price began potting the ball in the second session, sinking four field goals for eight points and individual scoring honors. His work gave Western a 12-4 margin at the half.

Landon Beats Blair Five By 31 to 28

Underdogs Score From Foul Line; Rayhart High

Outscoring Montgomery Blair High from the foul line by nine points to none, Landon Prep courtmen scored an upset 31-28 triumph yesterday in the Silver Spring gym.

It was the fourth defeat of the season for the high school lads, whose highly touted five is having a tough time keeping above the .500 percentage mark.

Forwards Rayhart and Dave Maloney, the latter a former Wilson High player, led the Prepsters to a 9-2 advantage at the first quarter and they increased the lead to a comfortable 17-8 margin at halftime.

Johnny Norris and Phil Mason led a Blair advance that closed the gap to 6 points at the third quarter and the losers were within 3 points of a tie twice in the final period but could never get closer.

The Landon five took advantage of wholesale fouling by the Blair five and dropped in 9 points from the charity stripe, while Coach Bride's charges missed three out of three.

Rayhart's 15 points, from six field goals and three tries, led the scorers, with Norris of the Blairites, and Maloney each accounting for 10 points. Only three Landon players figured in the scoring.

Writers Say Skis Date Back 4,000 Years

Those twin graceful sticks commonly known as skis, and just as commonly associated with falling not so gracefully in the snow, probably date back at least 4,000 years, according to the WPA Federal Writers' Project in New York City, which has just produced a new book "Skiing in the East," subtitled: "The Best Trails and How to Get There."

The word ski itself comes from the Finnish Ugrian, "suski," which the WPA scribes say is roughly translated as "snow-glide-shoes."

Joe Schenck Wins Hialeah Feature; Meade Rides 2 Winners

2 Jockeys Disciplined By Stewards

Ashcraft Set Down 10 Days; Wagner Is Fined $50

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 18.—Joe Schenck, one of the strong string owned by Herbert M. Woolf's Woolford Farm establishment, turned in the fastest six furlongs of the meeting here today when he easily won the Grade "B" Handicap. Ridden by little Freddie Smith, who scored a double the previous afternoon, Joe Schenck, a $4.30 for $2 choice in the field of eight, reported three lengths clear of Bomar Stable's Little Shaver. Tomara Stable's Teddy Weed lost the place by another three lengths. The winner flashed home in 1:10 1-5.

Jockey Don Meade won two races to bring his total for the meeting to 13 winners. Eddie Acaro rode one and now has 11 winners.

Little Shaver Off Well

Little Shaver, at a disadvantage in his last start when a soft track prevailed, showed brilliant speed today as far as he cared to carry it. Don Meade sent the Detroit representative right to the front, with Joe Schenck closest on the trail. Little Shaver stole 3 lengths clear in the first quarter mile. His advantage began to shrink around the bend, and Joe Schenck collared him inside the eighth pole. The Insco colt then breezed away, proving much the best. Teddy Weed, one of the outsiders, raced well up and had no trouble staving off the late bid of Go Home.

A. G. Tarn's Kai-Hi, a racy-looking son of Kai-Sang—San-Silk, electrified the crowd here today when he survived the blanket finish of the opening event to pay $113.20 for a $2 straight ticket. Seven of the dozen juveniles in the 3-furlong dash figured in the tight finish, with Hi Gold taking the place and Hamlin third. The time was :34 4-5.

2 Jockeys Disciplined

The stewards announced rulings on two riders. Apprentice J. Ashcroft was suspended for ten racing days, effective Friday, for striking Jockey Peters' mount, Hi Gold, over the head with his whip during the first race. Ashcroft was on Brilliant Gold. Joe Wagner was fined $50 for failure to ride out Radio Gold to finish third in the second race.

Don Meade had an easy assignment in the sixth race of 1 mile and a furlong. He had the mount on the $6.90 for $2 choice, Short Distance, and brought the St. James filly back with five lengths to spare in 1:50 1-5. Bewitched, shut off on the backstretch when he tried to go through on the inside, just got up to head inviting for secondary honors.

1939 Steel Rail Orders Expected To Double 1938

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Iron Age said today the steel trade estimated railroad orders for rails this year would approximate 1,000,000 tons, double the amount rolled last year. Iron and steel sales generally to the railroads, the trade publication reported, are expected to exceed the 1938 figure by at least 50 per cent.

Among rail orders coming into the market it cited Union Pacific allocations for upward of 100,000 tons of rails and accessories, 1,000 to 2,000 box cars and a small amount of passenger equipment, all in the inquiry stage.

Southern Pacific, it noted, plans to buy 40 locomotives in addition to 25,000 tons of rails. The Missouri Pacific was mentioned as likely to come into the market with sizable orders for rails and other equipment.

Utah Copper Cuts Production 10 Per Cent

Salt Lake City, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Utah Copper Co. announced today a 10 per cent reduction in production because of reduced sales of copper. D. D. Moffat, vice president and general manager, said reduction in working forces would be held to a minimum.

"Although copper sales have been poor in the last three months, output has been maintained at the current rate in the hope the market would improve," he said. "Now it is necessary to adjust production to a degree more nearly in keeping with current market requirements."

Wheat Demand From Overseas Lifts Prices

Gains Average a Cent Canada Heavy Seller Corn Prices Steady

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—The wheat market staged its best recovery in two weeks today as prices rose more than a cent a bushel on reports of improved demand abroad for wheat offered in the international trade.

Although no new domestic export business was confirmed, sales of Canadian wheat were the best in several days and buyers at Liverpool were reported taking new Argentine grain at firm prices. Indications that Argentina is not pressing her huge exportable surplus on the world market but is selling conservatively so as not to depress prices was an encouraging factor. Clear weather over most of the grain belt also aided the buying side.

Wheat closed at the best levels of the day, with buying improving in the final hour. Prices were ¾-⅞ higher than yesterday; May, 69⅝-69¾; July, 69⅝-69⅝. Corn was ⅛ lower to ¼ higher; May, 52⅜-52¼; July, 53½; oats, unchanged to ¼ up; rye, ¾-⅞ higher; lard, 10 to 13 higher.

Stocks Hold Steady in Dull Session Strength of Preferred Issues a Feature U. S. Treasury Bonds Score New Highs

New York, Jan. 18.—Prices were steady today in trading of only 628,160 shares, the dullest day on the big board since last September 22, which was the day following the hurricane and trading was hampered by the destruction of telephone and telegraph facilities. The list held to a narrow range and closed up an insignificant 0.03 point, with the rails, stores, motors and manufacturing divisions steady to higher. Aviation issues were helped by the reports which emanated from the secret session of the House Military Committee where emphasis was laid on the desirability of increasing our defenses.

A feature of the dull session was the comparative strength of preferred stock issues. For the last two days there has been evidence of investment funds flowing into the senior stock issues in order to get a better return than is provided by Government and other high-grade bonds. The Government list today went forward to new highs, but the dwindling of the rate of return is forcing some of the surplus investment funds into other channels, where the risk is considered to be not too great and the dividends provide a fairer wage for savings.

While the recent irregularity in the stock market has kept customers on the sidelines and the consequent dullness has dismayed the brokerage fraternity, there is a growing belief that this condition is rapidly on the mend. Encouraging the bullish forces and those who look for activity on the upside in the not distant future is the fact that prices have given way grudgingly and with great reluctance despite recent unfavorable news. This school of market students holds that the least betterment in business, or in political events affecting business, will meet with an immediate response marketwise.

Hopes of Power Peace

In the field of hopes, the bullish forces are pinning their faith on the possibility of a settlement of the long conflict between the Federal Government and the private utility companies. Limited appropriations may help get the Government out of this field of competition with private enterprise and there are reports from Washington that at least one of the advisers closest to the President is looking for a permanent settlement within six months. Obviously there is considerable surmise in the above, but there has been sufficient basis to it to win some important financial men away from the pessimistic side.

Leadership in today's market was not of the best. Most active stock was Continental Motors, selling at 3½, and second was Loft, at 10⅜, up a good fraction. Utilities settled down after the bulge of the closing hour on Tuesday. United Aircraft and Sperry led the aviations with fractional gains and Douglas was well supported. Better earnings and the prospect of legislation continues to support the rails. Loew's was a soft spot among the amusements and small declines were charged against Bethlehem and Steel.

Among the commodities wheat had its best recovery in two weeks on improved demand abroad. The close was at the best of the day, up ¾ to 1-1-8 cents. Cotton was irregular and narrow, closing a point higher to 4 points lower.

Treasury Bonds Strong

Trading in the listed bond market was quiet and uneventful today.

United States Treasury bonds continued to push slowly into higher territory, and 13 fresh records were noted on minute gains. In the speculative groups small gains outnumbered the modest losses, with railroad bonds making a fairly good general showing. Foreign dollar bonds tended to improve, where changed. Turnover in all issues was only $5,840,000, which is about half a normal day's business.

Institutional buyers continued to take up long-term United States Treasury securities, in the absence of fresh corporate offerings. Advances today ranged from 1-32 to 5-32 point. Treasury-guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations likewise were in demand, and presented a few high records. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds held to former levels, which in most cases are at or close to record levels.

Speculative railroad bonds gained some stimulus from the moves in Washington for aiding the carriers. Advances in the intermediate-priced interest payers were mostly fractional, but a few gains of a point or more appeared. Default rails also were considerably improved. Holding company bonds were dull and irregular and industrial convertibles were similarly inactive. Some of the amusement issues swept ahead on special considerations, while other special groups produced nothing new.

Somerville Resigns as Head Of 1st Federal

Was First President Reviews Year's Work Successor Not Named

Harry P. Somerville, managing director of the Willard Hotel, submitted his resignation as president of the First Federal Building and Loan Association of Washington at the annual meeting of the shareholders yesterday. His resignation was accepted with regret and a successor will be appointed later. In his report, after reviewing the satisfactory progress of the company, Mr. Somerville said:

"Purely on the plea that my services would be of value to the community, to the thousands of shareholders of the old Fidelity and to the building association industry generally, I agreed, now nearly two years ago, to become a member of the board of the First Federal. Somewhat later, and upon its formal organization, I very reluctantly agreed, at the request of my fellow directors and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, to become president of the new association.

Feels Task Is Ended

"This entailed considerable work and frankly represented a very considerable sacrifice on my part, as I am not one who is content merely to sit by and watch. Much more of my time was required during the trying days of reorganization than I had supposed, but I do not regret the effort, nor the time devoted, nor the energy expended.

"I have had my reward and my only reward—in the knowledge that I played a part in aiding those who were greatly embarrassed and injured through the closing of the old institution, and who realized, I believe, much more through the reorganization than would ever have been realized through a liquidation; and in the further knowledge that my efforts also aided to some extent in the restoration of confidence in other financial institutions.

"I feel, however, that my task is now ended. I am a hotel man, first, last and all the time. I can no longer give the time to the institution that it is necessary for me to give to it, if I am to be of value to it."

Cotton Dips; March at 8.40

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Cotton sagged a little more today as traders studied Washington reports of official conferences on cotton problems. Prices held within a range of 7 points throughout the session, closing one point higher to four lower. Most of the trade was in nearby positions. Spot houses were reported buyers of March at 100 points over October. Some liquidation of March contracts was attributed to commission houses.

December	7.47	7.47	7.40	7.40

Cottonseed Oil

Recent liquidation in cottonseed oil futures appeared to be drying up and price movements today were erratically higher. Final quotations were 6 to 9 points ahead. After again breaking into new low ground at the outset under trade and commission house offerings, refiner buying of March carried the list forward. March closed 7.01, May, 7.14; July, 7.22; September, 7.28. Sales, 189 lots. Crude oil sold at 5⅞ cents in the Southeast. The Valley quoted 5¾@5⅞ and Texas, 5¾@5¾.

B. & O. Interest Plan Goes Into Effect

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Daniel Willard, president of Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, announced today directors of the road had "declared operative" the carrier's plan for modification of interest charges and maturities. He said as of today, 73.54 per cent of the securities affected by the plan had "become subject thereto."

The plan calls for "voluntary" reduction of approximately $11,000,000 in annual fixed interest charges and extension of certain maturities.

Stock Seat $62,000, Decline of $7,000

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Arrangements were made today for transfer of a seat in the New York Stock Exchange at $62,000, a drop of $7,000 from the previous sale.

Last year an exchange membership hit a 20-year low mark when a seat was sold for $51,000 in June. A month later the 1938-39 top of $85,000 was reached.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"The Spaniards are slaughtering one another. The Japs are bombing noncombatants, including women and children. Bridge players are talking across the board about their aces and kings. Apparently anything goes. It may be that in the future there will be conventions countenancing trespass, theft, highway robbery, burglary, kidnaping and even murder, if cleverly done. We already have them in contract."

This blast comes from I. N. Winslow, whose own system a few years back was considered by some to be too artificial for tournament use. His argument is that the artificialities of his system are mild, compared with those conventions favored by the experts today, such as the Blackwood and other bids.

Mr. Winslow uses today's hand to prove his point, saying:

Privilege Paramount

"Messrs. East and West were playing against Messrs. North and South, who are supposed to be gentlemen, the stake being a cent a point. After several deals the accompanying hand was dealt and a thing most unusual took place. Mr. South opened the bidding with a diamond; Mr. West passed, and Mr. North bid two no-trump, indicating better than an average hand. Mr. East passed. South's hand was much stronger than his opening indicated, and after a slight pause he inquired of North the number of aces he held. East and West were shocked, but said nothing until after North spoke up, saying that he had three aces. East and West were amazed, but also were curious to know what would happen next. Then South asked North to tell him the number of kings he held. To this inquiry North said he had one king. After this interlude South got back into the traces and bid for seven-odd at no-trump.

"Sanctified by a bidding convention, indorsed by the bridge leagues and in high favor among the experts, the showing of aces and kings which could not be done directly is done indirectly and is, in this dress, considered ethical and aboveboard. Some convention—some game!"

What's the Difference?

Mr. Winslow probably would be delighted to know about the young man who at a recent tournament instructed his strange partner to "show your aces when I bid four no-trump." Shortly thereafter the young man had an occasion to bid four no-trump, in response to which his ingenuous partner withdrew two aces from his hand and held them up to the view of all. "Stop!" cried the horrified young man. "You're exposing your cards." "You asked me to show my aces, didn't you?" naively replied his partner.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

BOB MONAHAN, of the Forest Service, was almost entirely pessimistic yesterday as the snow banked slightly about the Agriculture Building. He said it is too wet a snow for any skiing yet; he hoped it would keep up, though and maybe . . . But Monahan (he starred on the skiis for Dartmouth) long ago gave up the notion of skiing in these parts. His very first winter here disillusioned him. And for all we know, he has put his skiis in mothballs.

But down at the Civil Service Commission, H. H. Leich, a vice president of the Washington Skii Club (which is loaded with Federal employes) was in a better frame of mind. The club, he said, has been skiing for the last couple of days in Rock Creek Park and on several hillsides around Washington.

Indeed, the outlook is so good with the snow of yesterday that the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club, headed by Myron H. Avery, of the Maritime Commission, is planning on going to Sexton Knoll, in the Shenandoah National Park, on Sunday for a spell of skiing. The Knoll was cleared for skiiers by the NPS and the Trail Club has waited two years for snow. They think Sunday will be the good luck day.

THE interest that Interior Department girls take in the I. D. R. A. Pistol Club intrigues. Ken Bailey, one of the big shots in the organization, lets us know that Jean Sanborn joined the I. D. R. A. almost solely because of the Pistol club And, incidentally, the greatest enthusiasts among the women didn't come from the Golden West. Anyhow, the club meets, in annual session, at 2 p. m. Saturday in Interior Room 3117 to elect officers and formulate policy. The present officers are: Frederick P. Knoll (WPA), president; H. A. Breakey (Bureau of Mines), vice president; Eva Gradijan (Geological Survey), treasurer; Virginia Ayres (NPS), secretary, and Robert Horn (NPS), range officer.

ADD the good fortune that has come to Ellen Maki, "Miss Civil Service," winner of The Washington Post Cup as the ideal feminine employe: The beautiful bracelet, evening bag and big basket of gladiolli her coworkers presented her at a rousing celebration meeting Tuesday afternoon. Her photo has gone to newspapers from coast-to-coast—and she knows how to take it—which is worth mentioning about a woman getting so much attention.

GOVERNMENT employes are afforded an opportunity by the trustees of the French Language School of Washington to acquire a knowledge of French, free of tuition. A class of beginners will organize Wednesday evenings at 7:15 o'clock at the school, 1206 Eighteenth street northwest. Rudolphe de Zapp, the president, comments: "This is an annual custom of the school covering more than 20 years. There also are free tuition classes in various stages of progress and these meet every evening at 7:15 for an hour. Among the more than 150 students are many members of the diplomatic and consular service, the Army, Navy and other branches of the Government."

HELP is needed for the family of a WPA worker in Agriculture Department. He has a wife and six children, the youngest twin boys, aged 7 months. The family needs a mattress for a crib for the twins. If interested contact Mrs. Winfree, room 1041, South Agricultural Building.

JOBS: Senior field representative, $3,800; field representative, $3,200; apprenticeship service, Labor Department. Experience in development and a promotion of improved labor standards, or the administration of labor laws is required. The top age limit is 53. The jobs are civil service.

DR. HERBERT INSLEY, who professes to know nothing of good food, has been named chairman of the cafeteria committee at the Bureau of Standards. He is asking for good menus and recipes.

Bob Burns Says—

Some people sure has glorified ideas of theirselves. The other day, a bird sent me his pitcher. "Everybody says I look like you," he writes. "So please autograph my pitcher an' send it back to me so I can have a photograph of you to show my friends!" Just why he felt complimented, lookin' like me, in the first place, is more'n I can figger out.

Now, take some of my relatives, for instance. They wouldn't own up that I resembled them until I got my homely lookin' map in the papers an' on the screen. An', as far as television is concerned, I understand I'm one of the principal reasons why it's bein' held back. They're afraid to trust the apparatus in front of my mugg. But, be that as it may, my Aunt Boo an' my Grandpa Snazzy is havin' the goshdernedest argument over me. Aunt Boo claims I got her eyes an' Grandpa Snazzy claims, if I growed a moustache, it would be just like his. Then Cousin Wafford chimes in to say I got the same bumps of intelligence on my head that he has. Looks like I'll have to make-up after this to suit the combined ideas of all my relations! Which'll mean that I won't be lookin' like myself any more at all!

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Pinch of Hunger

Two things—starvation and great cold—
Make even timid people bold.
—Old Mother Nature.

The two, hunger and cold, go together. People with plenty to eat seldom suffer greatly from cold. Shelter always is easier to find than food. Especially is this true of the people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. Given food enough they defy Jack Frost and rough Brother North Wind and the worst they can do. But it is just when those two are at their worst that food is most difficult to find. Then even the most timid among them become bold with desperation.

Peter Rabbit gets along very well excepting after an ice storm when everything is wrapped in a coating of ice. At other times he can always eat bark and small twigs with their buds.

"It isn't what I call good living," Peter said to his big cousin, Jumper the Hare, when they met one evening, "but it does keep a fellow going."

Jumper nodded in agreement. "Just so, and that is the important thing, to keep going. I really don't see how some folks, those who must have meat or starve, manage to get by. I could almost feel sorry for some of them who try so hard to catch me and fail. I guess you and I don't know what real hunger is. I am glad we don't have to eat meat," said Jumper.

"I wonder if anybody really has to," replied Peter.

There were several who could have answered that one for Peter had they overheard it and their answer would have been "yes." Hooty the Owl was one. At that very minute he was wondering how much longer he could go with an empty stomach. He could have told Peter that he really had to have meat because he couldn't digest other food. His bill, his crop and stomach were designed by Old Mother Nature to take care of meat and not other food.

Yowler the Bobcat and Reddy Fox and Old Man Coyote were others who would have said they had to have meat. They have been given meat-eating teeth, not the sort of teeth that are needed by those who live on vegetables, fruits, plants and seeds.

They were feeling the pinch of hunger. They had been feeling it for some time, but it was worse now than it had been. At first when it had become difficult to get a full meal as often as it was wanted the pinch of hunger was not too hard to bear. They were in good condition then from the days of plenty. But as time went on and full meals were farther and farther apart hunger increased and was harder to bear. Now had come a time when a full meal was something to be had only in a dream. In reality a few bites was something to be thankful for. Now the pinch of hunger was felt all the time instead of just between meals.

There are two things that sharpen wits—hunger and danger. The hunters were feeling the pinch of hunger more and more and they became bolder and more cunning. They not only had to outwit those they hunted, but also must outwit others who hunted. Every eater of meat was in competition with every other eater of meat. And constant hunting made the ones hunted more watchful and more careful and had sharpened their wits. Of course this made it all the harder for those who hunted.

Now Reddy Fox is smart at all times. Among all the people who wear fur is none with keener wits than his, few with wits as keen. When he and Mrs. Reddy began to really feel the pinch of hunger they put their heads together and agreed that they must find new hunting grounds.

If so, we applaud your independence, and have no desire to interfere . . . but even knowing definitely what you want, you might like some help in finding it. And strange as it may seem, some women feel hesitant about asking for help. We understand perfectly. First, they have an idea it might make them appear helpless. Secondly, they suppose that asking information involves spending money and spending a lot. But none of this is true at The Hecht Co.

Up on our Fourth Floor we've built a little make-believe house with an honest-to-goodness purpose in life. It's a clearing house for ideas; a restful, pleasant room in which to plan color schemes, to pick and choose furnishings, to "mull things over" with a trained decorator, at your leisure.

A comfortable chat with "Mary Annette," who is our Decorating Hostess, may reveal all sorts of surprises. She may discover that right in your own home are treasures you've been hiding. Many a woman in Washington can assure you that she has saved them not only time but many a penny as well. And her service is yours for the asking.
